MUSIC! LISTINGS
live and livestreamed

STORIES profiles, previews and interviews

RECORD REVIEWS
and Listening Room

Trichy Sankaran

thewholenote.com
THAT CHOIR
conducted by Craig Pike

All tickets are PAY WHAT YOU CAN

Book tickets:
thatchoir.com

November 11 & 12, 2022 | 8pm
St. Anne's Anglican Church

December 17 & 18, 2022 | 3pm & 8pm
St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church

THAT CHOIR
REMEMBERS
REMEMBERS
REMEMBERS
REMEMBERS

THAT CHOIR
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
CAROLS
VIOLINISSIMO
with the concertmasters of Esprit, COC & National Ballet of Canada

Sunday November 27

Alex Pauk, C.M., Founder, Music Director & Conductor
7:15pm Pre-concert talks with Alexina Louie
8:00pm Concerts
at Koerner Hall

José Evangelista (CA)
Violinissimo concerto for violin and orchestra

Andrew Staniland (CA)
Six Enigmas* concerto for violin and orchestra

John Rea (CA)
Figures hâtives concerto for violin and orchestra

Alexina Louie (CA)
Triple Concerto for Three Violins and Orchestra

Aaron Schwebel (violin)
Stephen Sitarški (violin)
Marie Bérard (violin)

*World Premiere & Esprit Commission

TICKETS
Koerner Hall Box Office
416 408 0208
espritorchestra.com

The Michael and Sonja Koerner Charitable Foundation
The Mary-Margaret Webb Foundation
The S.M. Blair Family Foundation

The Max Clarkson Family Foundation
The Charles H. Ivey Foundation
Timothy & Frances Price
Anonymous
By the time this photo of Trichy Sankaran was selected for our cover, the indefatigable 80-year-old maestro was somewhere between Houston and Vancouver on a 14-city tour, and not available for comment. He will be back in Toronto for “Sankaran @ 80” - presented by Confluence Concerts, and curated by Suha Sankaran (Nov 23 and 24) who offered these thoughts about her own musical childhood: “Many musicians from India visited at that time, and they would be welcomed in our home. As per the South Indian music tradition, the senior musicians were expected to teach the children of the house some songs - a way of passing the torch and maintaining and sustaining the guru-kula (guru-disciple or teacher-student) tradition. I learned from the best of the best, from my father on down!”

The photograph is courtesy Brhaddhvani Centre for World Music - a non-profit organisation based in Chennai, India, founded in 1989 by Dr. Karaikudi S. Subramanian, with the vision of making South Indian music education accessible to all.

PHOTO: BRHADDHVANI (CENTRE FOR WORLD MUSIC, CHENNAI, INDIA).
STORIES & INTERVIEWS
22 CLASSICAL AND BEYOND | Mervon Mehta in conversation
- circle Feb 1, 2023 | PAUL ENNIS
24 USUALLY CLUBS, BUT NOT THIS TIME | Decorum be damned! Jazz in the concert hall | COLIN STORY
26 LAUNCHES | Meanwhile, back at Chalmers House | MAX CHRISTIE
70 REMEMBERING | Geoff Nuttall, violinist | PAUL ENNIS

LISTINGS
28 Events by date
Live and/or Live Streamed
41 CLUBS
42 The Blue Pages, 23rd annual directory of music makers

DISCOVERIES: RECORDINGS REVIEWED
45 Editor’s Corner | DAVID OLDS
47 Strings Attached | TERRY ROBBINS
49 Vocal
51 Classical and Beyond
56 Modern and Contemporary
62 Jazz and Improvised Music
66 Pot Pourri
68 Something in the Air | KEN WAXMAN
69 New to the Listening Room, INDEX

ATMA Classique

Cellist Yegor Dyachkov and pianist Jean Saulnier present Beethoven’s complete Sonatas and Variations for Cello and Piano in a 3-CD box set.
Release date October 28, 2022

NEW RELEASES

ATMACLASSIQUE.COM
Hey, my uncle has a barn!

DAVID PERLMAN

Pretend we are on Jeopardy. On Jeopardy, not in jeopardy – that comes later. It’s the last remaining clue in what has proved to be a surprisingly difficult category. “I’ll take Music Theatre for a thousand, Alex.” (Oh how we miss him, still.)

“In the film version of this musical, released in 1939, and directed by Busby Berkeley, its radically revised plot retained only two songs from the original stage version which had strong political overtones with discussions of Nietzsche, a Communist character, and two African-American youths who are victims of racism.” (Says Wikipedia, by the way.)

No one hazards a guess.

“ Babies in Arms”, Alex says. “In this iconic 1937 Rodgers and Hart coming-of-age musical comedy, a group of small-town Long Island teenagers put on a show to avoid being sent to a work farm by the town sheriff when their actor parents go on the road for five months in an effort to earn some money by reviving vaudeville.”

In fairness to our contestants, the original clue, as I’ve framed it here, would never have made it past the uncle responsible for approving Alex’s script. Had the clue been that this is the show where Judy Garland tells Mickey Rooney ‘Hey, my uncle has a barn!’ we’d all have hit our buzzers.

The sanitization of the original stage play continued. In the 1959 re-write of the script by George Oppenheimer – the only version available for performance from 1959 to 1998 – the young people are trying to save a local summer stock theatre from being demolished, not trying to avoid being sent to a work farm. For better and for worse, the trope of artists as children – lucky enough to be having fun doing what they love while raising money for worthy causes – has been entrenched with “hey, my uncle has a barn” as its defining meme: shorthand for the barnstorming luck that is just waiting out there for you when you don’t have the assets, financial and circumstantial that is, to pursue your artistic dreams.

In my version, updated and Canadianized of course, the actor-parents apply for a Canada Council touring grant to take the kids along. Then, when their application is turned down, they come to their senses and get real jobs, so their kids can chase their dreams.

My uncle and only uncle had a barn. Well, two barns and three grading sheds actually, in what was called Rhodesia, back in the day when what the barns and sheds were being used to produce (tobacco) was as little acknowledged as a problem as the question of whose land the barns were on.

Mind you, that didn’t stop me, decades later, from turning to my beloved uncle for help in buying the first computer we needed to start making the community newspaper that in turn spawned this magazine. Blood money. We reached our 55,000th free listing the other day.

So here’s the in jeopardy bit

Philanthropy in the form of uncles with barns, actual or metaphorical, is a real hit-and-miss way of doing things in the arts. It can work out (very badly for you) when your “uncle’s” barn is Louise B. Mayer’s Hollywood film studio. It can work unequivocally well (such as at Crow’s Theatre in Toronto’s downtown east) when the chemistry between an avuncular developer and a visionary theatre company clicks.

But it works disproportionately to the advantage of the already lucky – those with roots and connections and networks already in place. And it works equally disproportionately in favour of artists, rich and poor alike, who are clustered in and around the downtown. Or has done, so far. Except that now the ability for the working poor, artists among them, to keep a roof over one’s head long enough to meet someone whose uncle has a barn is threatened as never before by skyrocketing occupancy costs. Ironically enough, those of us who have benefited most from living in proximity to the cultural industries of the city’s downtown are now the ones most at risk of displacement.

I had a call from someone in east Scarborough the other day, following up on an e-mail inquiry I’d never responded to, almost a year previously. “Would you happen to know of even one secular rehearsal space in Scarborough?” they wanted to know, “neither located in a Church, Synagogue or Mosque, nor affiliated with a religious organization (for example, the YMCA), accessible, well-lit, warm in the winter and cool in the summer, with high ceilings and a friendly and proficient staff.” I had to reply that I did not know.

We need to do better, and we’re not the only ones.

Avuncular developers with pockets deep enough to house the mayor and city council in are no substitute for enlightened policy.

David Perlman can be reached at publisher@thewholenote.com
A HARMONIOUS HOLIDAY
A CONCERT OF PEACE AND HARMONY

TUESDAY | DEC.6 | 7:30 PM
Metropolitan United Church

FORTE
HANNAFORD STREET SILVER BAND
FORTE
TORONTO GAY MEN’S CHOIR
Host
Tom Allen

Tickets: visit hssb.ca
Phone: 416.366.7723 OR 1.800.708.6754

The Nathaniel Dett Chorale
Connecting Through Afrocentric Music

An Indigo Christmas...
THE BROWN KING

This special evening will feature The Ballad of the Brown King.
The work honours the African King Balthazar, depicted as one of the three magi who came to visit Jesus, the new born king.
The music was written by the African American composer
Margaret Bonds, with text by the Harlem Renaissance author and poet Langston Hughes; and was inspired by and dedicated to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Saturday, December 3, 2022
George Weston Recital Hall | Meridian Arts Centre
Adults: $45 | Seniors (65+): $39 | Children (5-12): $15

Find out more at nathanieldettchorale.org
Let’s start at the beginning. Trichy Sankaran was born on July 27, 1942 in Poovalur, Thiruchirappalli district of Tamil Nadu in southern India. Another significant date occurred 29 years later when the classically trained Indian drummer Sankaran took a momentous leap of faith across the globe, accepting a job teaching at the fledging Music Department, York University. He arrived in 1971, retired in 2015. What he accomplished in between is the subject of the first part of this story, and the prequel to the second part.

Indian music moves to Toronto

Fact one: the 1960s was a banner decade for Western public interest in Indian music. It was on LP, radio, TV and in live concerts across Europe and North America. Fact two: towards the decade’s close, in the first months of 1969, American musicologist and choral conductor Sterling Beckwith, York University Music Department’s new Chair, was busy setting up in what was then the wild northwestern outskirts of Toronto.

Beckwith’s startup vision included creating opportunities for students to engage directly with music from cultures outside the Europe-centred tradition in which many were trained. He observed that Western audiences had long been captivated by the virtuosity of touring artists such as sitarist Ravi Shankar, and that Music of India courses were filling classrooms at US universities. So, why not Indian music at York too?

Enter the phenomenal young American baritone and ethnomusicologist Jon B. Higgins. A graduate of Wesleyan University’s pioneering World Music program, Higgins received his initial training as a Carnatic vocalist there. By the late 1960s he had already toured in India, impressing connoisseurs with his vocal and linguistic prowess, and had released a Carnatic vocal LP, when Beckwith invited him to join the York Music faculty.

Requiring an accompanist in order to perform his repertoire, Higgins persuaded Sankaran to leave his family and a vibrant concert career in Chennai and accompany him to York. The two founded Indian music studies at York, among the first such programs in the country.

My own hybrid musical journeys: Carnatic studies meet gamelan concerts

When I first heard Higgins’ premiere LP around 1970, the light of recognition switched on: the recognition that even as a neophyte I knew this was music I wanted to learn. Carnatic music is sometimes characterised as difficult to master, yet Higgins made it sound... natural. I was immediately drawn to his convincing bicultural musicality. A trip to India was however not on my itinerary.

Luckily I didn’t have to wait long. On hearing that Higgins would arrive at York in the fall of 1971, I jumped at the chance to enroll in his first Carnatic vocal class. Later, I took mridangam lessons with Sankaran. It signalled the beginning of a long and fruitful relationship not only with Carnatic music but also with these teachers who became mentors, then colleagues and friends.

For example, in 1984 Sankaran was commissioned to...

---

Members of Nada Rasa ensemble at Gamelan Summit 1997, DuMaurier Theatre, Harbourfront Centre, Toronto. Left to Right: Trichy Sankaran (mridangam, kendangs), Andrew Timar (seling tembang), Ernie Tollar (sop. sax), Subasankaran (vocals, keyboard).
to compose Svaralaya, his first ensemble work. It was for Toronto’s Evergreen Club Gamelan of which I was a charter musician and second Artistic Director. The composer was the soloist playing a set of five specially-tuned mridangams. Four subsequent challenging works for ECG followed over the next fruitful 25 years.

Then for over two decades beginning in 1994, Sankaran and I (on suiling) performed as a duo in Toronto (New Music Concerts, The Music Gallery, York University, etc.), Ottawa (Museum of Civilization) and St. John’s (Sound Symposium), before we formed Nada Rasa – a band which played concerts of our hybrid Java-meets-India-in-Toronto music into the 2000s.

Overlapping careers: Sankaran the virtuoso musician, composer, professor of music

The hybrid work Sankaran made with ECG and me is not at all unusual for him. He’s often chosen to take the path less travelled – and often travelled it with musicians outside the Carnatic world. He’s regularly collaborated with top percussionists such as Nexus; tabla masters Sharda Sahai and Zakir Hussain; Ghanaiian drummer Abraham Adzenyah; John Wyre’s World Drums, as well as many jazz, electronic and classical musicians. In 2020 I saw him and his daughter Suba Sankaran featured in Tafelmusik’s memorable Toronto production The Indigo Project.

While Sankaran is a world-renowned percussion virtuoso and respected composer, he’s also an Indian music scholar and educator. Over the years he has innovatively fused Carnatic and Western pedagogical practices and authored two books on Carnatic rhythmic performance. achievements recognized by the OCUFA Award presented to him by the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations.

His influence over several generations of international students, some of whom have developed into noted musicians, composers and educators, can’t be overstated. In 2011 he was honoured with the prestigious title Sangitha Kalanidhi for his contributions to the world of Karnataka music by the Madras Music Academy.

At 80, how is he celebrating his birthday? He’s touring North American cities with a Carnatic ensemble as I write this.

Confluence Concerts presents Trichy Sankaran at 80, November 23 and 24, 2022

Those celebrations continue in his hometown with Trichy Sankaran at 80, a concert presented by Confluence Concerts at Toronto’s Heliconian Hall on November 23 and 24. His talented daughter – vocalist, composer and educator Suba Sankaran – the curator of the concerts, shared some details.

The packed 12-item program presents works primarily by Sankaran or other members of the bespoke ensemble featuring former Sankaran students and colleagues. The roster: Autorickshaw (Dylan Bell on bass/beatboxing, Ed Hanley on tabla, Suba Sankaran on voice and vocal percussion); Andrew Craig (piano); Curtis Andrews
These musicians were chosen because they represent various projects in Sankaran’s long, illustrious career. For example, Hartenberger of NEXUS was a member of the percussion super group World Drums with which Sankaran toured internationally for years. Hartenberger will lead the ensemble in Steve Reich’s 1972 minimalist masterwork Clapping Music.

Bill Parsons and I represent Evergreen Club Contemporary Gamelan for whom Sankaran composed groundbreaking works fusing Indonesian and Indian musics. While Members of Autorickshaw alongside Ken Shorley, Andrew Craig and Curtis Andrews are all former students and Sankaran collaborators, this concert marks the first time they’re together on stage. There will also be a pre-concert chat followed by a 10-minute video detailing Sankaran’s biography with musical illustrations.

Full circle

On October 8, 2022 Sterling Beckwith spoke at the Sankaran @ 80 Felicitation event at the Canada Kanthaswamy Temple in Scarborough. “Sankaran has never failed to honour his roots, even while his circle of influence grows ever wider” Beckwith said. “His artistry in performance is always surprising, always responsive, always appropriate. His appearances around the world have won him the highest professional recognition as the very model of an authentic classical Carnatic virtuoso. At the ripe age of 80, he shows no signs of slowing down. Indeed, he’s still touring, still exploring new challenges, still going strong...

“Who needs Trichy Sankaran?” A pause. “We all do!”

Andrew Timar is a Toronto musician, composer and music journalist. He can be contacted at worldmusic@thewholenote.com.

Left to right: Trichy Sankaran (mridangam) in concert with vocalist Sandeep Narayanan, an unknown tambura player and violinist V.V.S. Murari at the Canada Kanthaswamy Temple, October 8, 2022. (Note: the tambura player in Carnatic music is often a student or community member. They are usually not announced in advance and are uncredited— as in the case of this concert.)
CAROL SING
In collaboration with Citytv

SATURDAY
DECEMBER 3 - 3:00pm
YORKMINSTER PARK BAPTIST CHURCH
1585 Yonge St. (1 block north of St. Clair Ave.)

HOST
Dina Pugliese

SPECIAL GUESTS
Loreena McKennitt
AND Toronto Mass Choir

FEATURING
HOGTOWN BRASS
Bach Children’s Chorus
Yorkminster Park Choir
Hedgerow Singers

ADMISSION FREE
A collection will be taken for the Churches on-the-Hill Food Bank

Yorkminster Park
BAPTIST CHURCH
YORKMINSTERPARK.COM | 9SPARROWSARTS.ORG

December 6 & 7, 2022
7:30pm

YORKMINSTER PARK BAPTIST CHURCH
(Yonge & St. Clair)

Jean-Sébastien Vallée, Conductor
Isabelle Demers, Organist
Toronto Mendelssohn Choir
Toronto Mendelssohn Singers

tmchoir.org

Scan for Tickets

Classical FM
GNT Productions
There’s some good news for a change: there’s a new professional chamber choir in Toronto, the city that barely has any, and none independent from larger arts organizations. Meet the Toronto Mendelssohn Singers, the new 24-member chamber choir within the larger Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, now forging its own path, mostly by way of contemporary music and commissions.

When I met with the man behind the project, choral conductor Jean-Sébastien Vallée, to discuss the new ensemble, I couldn’t think of more than a few other professional choirs in Toronto: Tafelmusik’s chamber choir, the COC’s chorus, Elmer Iseler Singers. That Choir became fully professional this year. Nathaniel Dett Chorale and Amadeus Choir also offer paid positions in their midst. Every other chorus or choir you encounter on Toronto stages will likely consist of unpaid singers.

Toronto Mendelssohn Choir, the old mainstay of Toronto’s concert halls, used to have a chamber core of professional musicians – the Elora Singers, a different company with its own separate season – but is otherwise populated by talented unpaid musicians. Next time you see a big chorus above the orchestra at Roy Thomson Hall, it’s worth knowing that all but 24 of the singers will be volunteering to be there.

Which will still be the case going forward. The big change that the new TMC music director Vallée has ushered in is the TMC’s own professional core choir, which will perform its own concerts – effectively, have its own season – and specialize in repertoire created specifically for this magic instrument that is the a cappella chamber choir.

This new direction for the TMC organization, Vallée tells me when we meet for tea, was originally his proposal, already suggested during the hiring process. “From the start, I thought what we needed to do first is create a professional choir. The TMC used to have professional singers in their midst but they did not perform as a TMC chamber choir. They were also a different group, under a different brand. I felt we needed to create a professional choir entirely our own, with a full season which contributes to the bigger mission of the TMC.”

The original 20 paying gigs in the TMC were expanded to include four more. The Toronto Mendelssohn Singers are 24 people, but those will not always be the same singers concert to concert – though they will all come from the same auditioned and tested pool. “We re-auditioned everybody,” says Vallée, “and we are happy to offer more work to the best of the best throughout the season: we’re talking about 170 hours of work. We get to spend more time together. I get to know them and learn their strengths and they get to know me and get used to me. So far, it’s been great.”

When I met Vallée in September, the chamber choir was rehearsing for the first concert of the season, which would include an hour-long a cappella piece, Path of Miracles by Joby Talbot, composed in 17 voice parts. Another, shorter piece on the program was by the composer-in-residence for this year, Shireen Abu-Khader. This is another novelty. “For the first time we have a composer-in-residence for the year,” says Vallée. “We will perform several pieces by the same composer on a given year. We’ll perform one of Shireen’s earlier works and three brand new ones, which will fit into our programming. Composers will be directly engaged with the choir: having discussions with us, being present in rehearsals.”

The beauty of a small group, he continues, is that you can be creative with locations. “We are looking at non-traditional venues. In March, we’re performing at the Little Trinity church, a program around the theme of homelessness, but for next year we’re looking at some old factories that we can use... I like situations where the music and the architecture create something together, either go well together or clash in productive ways. The audience is also smaller in the chamber choir context, and we can position singers in differently, depending on the venue.”

The a cappella challenge

Will the TMS be focusing on a cappella chamber rep? “Yes, mostly. The challenge of singing a cappella is what makes it exciting. It doesn’t take much for the human voice to change the pitch... it’s fragile. Notes must be found out of the blue and maintained and landed back on with precision. I think that choral music at the highest level requires such a huge amount of skills for the singers. Good musicianship, technique, ear.”

Not a lot of Canadian composers write for a cappella choirs, precisely because of this scarcity of the “instrument”, I suggest. What attracted Vallée to choral singing – and choral pedagogy? “It’s hard: that’s its attraction. Human voice is dependent on so many things, including the change of season, group dynamics... It’s musically demanding and also humanly demanding.”

In terms of technique, he says, it’s roughly the same to conduct a group of instrumentalists and a choir – but the sound is different and is tied to different gestures. “Your gesture for example for trumpet and strings will be different from the gesture shaping the human voice, because the sounds are produced in very different ways.” As an associate professor of music and director of choral studies at the Schulich School of Music at McGill University, Vallée has developed a keen interest in the connection between gesture and audiation. “What informs my gestures during conducting? This is the way I hear the music in my head. This gesture I associate in my head with this kind of tone. Other singers too – without talking, without words, are moving with me. There are gestures that seemingly affect change in singing naturally, without being explicitly taught.”

What is the connection? “There are studies now that look at mirror neurons, neurons that fire when you observe a gesture, without necessarily performing it physically. That’s why for example when we listen to a singer with a tight jaw for 15 minutes we go ‘wow my own jaw feels really tight’. It’s not just empathy and understanding, it’s neurological, it appears. Even how we walk and stand on stage will have effects. There are ways of affecting someone’s performance that take place without singers even (consciously) knowing that it’s happening.”
Christmas at Metropolitan United Jonathan Oldengarm, Minister of Music

Sunday Dec. 4 at 1pm
Deck the Halls! Carol Sing: Metropolitan Silver Band, Organist Jonathan Oldengarm, Singers & Mystery Musician!

Sunday Dec. 18 at 7pm
Candlelight Lessons & Carols with The Metropolitan Choir

Saturday Dec. 24 at 5pm
Family Christmas Eve: A Contemporary Service

Saturday Dec. 24, 11pm
Choral Candlelight Christmas with Communion

metunited.ca  56 Queen St. E. Toronto
CAROLS BY CANDLELIGHT
SUNDAY, DECEMBER 11, 4:30PM
A traditional candlelight choral presentation featuring choirs and musicians of Yorkminster Park.

NINE LESSONS & CAROLS
SUNDAY, DECEMBER 18, 4:30PM
Following the historic tradition of King’s College in Cambridge.

Admission is FREE for both events
Doors open at 3:30pm

DEC 3 at 7:30PM
Sing Massey Hall Noël
Toronto’s Christmas Tradition is back
St. Michael’s Choir School

SPECIAL GUESTS
True North Brass

CONDUCTORS
Maria Conkey
Teri Dunn
S. Bryan Paddy

ACCOMPANIST
Philip Fillion

Tickets $40—$105
masseyhall.mhrth.com
IN WITH THE NEW

IN WITH THE NEW

Alexina Louie

The idea of programming an entire concert of violin concertos was an idea cooked up by Esprit’s conductor and music director Alex Pauk. Louie’s response when Pauk proposed the idea was to push back: “How can you do that? How often have you heard three violinists playing three violin concertos on one concert? In all of my concertgoing days, I’ve never seen a concert like that.” But Pauk persisted.

The concert will feature Aaron Schwebel from the National Ballet of Canada Orchestra performing José Evangelista’s concerto Violinissimo, written in 1992, which Esprit has performed before; Marie Bérard from the Canadian Opera Company Orchestra performing John Rea’s Figures hâtives written in 2006, a work she has previously performed; and Stephen Stairski, Esprit Orchestra’s concertmaster, performing a newly commissioned work, Six Enigmas, by Andrew Staniland. The concert will conclude with Louie’s Triple Concerto for Three Violins and Orchestra that was commissioned by three different orchestras in 2017 to celebrate Canada’s sesquicentennial year: The Toronto Symphony Orchestra, the National Arts Centre Orchestra and the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, performed, in that case, by each of their respective concert masters.

About writing a triple concerto, Louie commented: “It was quite a challenge for me to write the piece, because each soloist’s part has to be equally as important. Even if you have two violinists you can have a question-and-answer structure, or a competition between the two. Two is doable, but three becomes a bit unwieldy. You can’t have one violinist shine and the other two have rests.” And how did she resolve this dilemma? “Each violinist has a moment with their own solo, and they also play as an ensemble with melodic lines that dovetail into each other. In some instances, there is a solo with the other two accompanying with harmony. Each one of them however has the same sheen on their part. There is very tricky interplay between the three violinists with interlocking and complex motifs.”

Louie laughed at how demanding it was to complete the piece to her musical satisfaction. “I probably threw out more pages than I kept.” Part of the challenge was because writing such a work is not a form that is familiar or that one has much experience with. “It’s hard enough to write a concerto, but to write a concerto for three exceptional violinists was something your brain really has to think about.”

Four Concertos and One String Quartet

WENDALYN BARTLEY

A wild idea coming to fruition.” That is how composer Alexina Louie summed up the nature of Esprit Orchestra’s concert on November 27, featuring three exceptional concertmasters all based in Toronto and all sharing the stage, performing four violin concertos as part of Esprit Orchestra’s 40th season (an amazing feat in its own right).

The idea of programming an entire concert of violin concertos was an idea cooked up by Esprit’s conductor and music director Alex Pauk. Louie’s response when Pauk proposed the idea was to push back: “How can you do that? How often have you heard three violinists playing three violin concertos on one concert? In all of my concertgoing days, I’ve never seen a concert like that.” But Pauk persisted.

The concert will feature Aaron Schwebel from the National Ballet of Canada Orchestra performing José Evangelista’s concerto Violinissimo, written in 1992, which Esprit has performed before; Marie Bérard from the Canadian Opera Company Orchestra performing John Rea’s Figures hâtives written in 2006, a work she has previously performed; and Stephen Stairski, Esprit Orchestra’s concertmaster, performing a newly commissioned work, Six Enigmas, by Andrew Staniland. The concert will conclude with Louie’s Triple Concerto for Three Violins and Orchestra that was commissioned by three different orchestras in 2017 to celebrate Canada’s sesquicentennial year: The Toronto Symphony Orchestra, the National Arts Centre Orchestra and the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, performed, in that case, by each of their respective concert masters.

About writing a triple concerto, Louie commented: “It was quite a challenge for me to write the piece, because each soloist’s part has to be equally as important. Even if you have two violinists you can have a question-and-answer structure, or a competition between the two. Two is doable, but three becomes a bit unwieldy. You can’t have one violinist shine and the other two have rests.” And how did she resolve this dilemma? “Each violinist has a moment with their own solo, and they also play as an ensemble with melodic lines that dovetail into each other. In some instances, there is a solo with the other two accompanying with harmony. Each one of them however has the same sheen on their part. There is very tricky interplay between the three violinists with interlocking and complex motifs.”

Louie laughed at how demanding it was to complete the piece to her musical satisfaction. “I probably threw out more pages than I kept.” Part of the challenge was because writing such a work is not a form that is familiar or that one has much experience with. “It’s hard enough to write a concerto, but to write a concerto for three exceptional violinists was something your brain really has to think about.”
“Funky, cool and bad,” is how Robert Cray describes his latest album, That’s What I Heard. Over the past four decades, Cray has created a sound that rises from American roots, blues, soul and R&B, with five Grammy wins, 20 acclaimed studio albums and a bundle of live albums that punctuate the Blues Hall of Famer’s career. On That’s What I Heard, Robert celebrates the music of Curtis Mayfield, Bobby “Blue” Bland, The Sensational Nightingales and more, alongside four newly written songs.

Join Performing Arts Brampton for another performance of Jazz @ LBP hosted by Jaymz Bee. Avataar’s music is inspired by the deep musical traditions of India, Africa and Brazil, rooted within the framework of modern jazz. In an innovative marriage of ancient and modern, driving grooves intersect with cinematic atmospheres and soaring melodies, creating a fresh, emotive sonic experience. Bandmembers share an eclectic range of musical expertise - hardbop, pop, rock, electronica, free improvisation, world and R&B/Soul filter into the interpretations of the tunes.

Diwali, Hannukah, Kwanza, Christmas, this truly is a season of light for everyone! Celebrate with the Rose Orchestra and choral guests as they share the glory of the holiday season with you, their extended family, and friends.

Join Brampton Concert Band for their annual Christmas show at The Rose, as they perform a joyous collection of holiday favourites.

The piece begins with a display of orchestral colour before moving into a falling motif marked sospirando, which means sighing. The audience begins to be lulled into an orchestral space and then suddenly the three violinists jump in, and the piece really begins to take off. She highlighted that there will be a lot of energy coming from the stage throughout the evening and, in her own piece, to expect a lot of fireworks and a very jubilant ending.

One of Louie’s roles during the night of the performance, as she usually does at Esprit concerts, is to host the pre-concert chat. Often she is only able to speak with the composers, she explains, because the performers are getting ready to let loose on stage. This time, she says, she’s going to try hard to get all three violinists to speak with her, as well as Staniland and Rea. “I will have a stage full of talking musicians and composers, which will be fun,” she says.

Kronos Quartet

The Kronos Quartet will finally be returning to Toronto to present a three-part event, originally scheduled for January of 2022 as part of the 21C Music Festival, that had to be cancelled for COVID reasons. The December 6 concert will showcase the multimedia performance piece, A Thousand Thoughts, that combines live performance with a documentary film written and directed by Sam Green and Joe Bini created from archival footage and filmed interviews with composers such as Philip Glass, Steve Reich, Tanya Tagaq and Terry Riley. The focus of the piece is an intimate look at the Kronos’s project Fifty for the Future, a free downloadable library of 50 contemporary works they commissioned to help introduce young string players to the various approaches of contemporary composition.

Two nights later on December 8, Kronos will perform repertoire from the project with students from the Glenn Gould School. And finally on December 9, their concert Music for Change will be presented, with repertoire from Steve Reich (the Canadian premiere of his Pendulum Music) and a remix of Tagaq’s piece, Colonizer, which arose originally while Tagaq was improvising with the film Nanook of the North close to New York City’s Columbus Circle, a traffic circle with a monument to the colonizer Columbus himself at its heart.
More than “a play with music”

JENNIFER PARR

When is a play with music just that, and at what point does it cross some threshold into becoming “music theatre?” This is a question I grapple with all the time but it came up prominently in a conversation about an eagerly anticipated show about to open, and then was brought into sharp relief by two other productions already happening, almost simultaneously, this fall in Toronto.

Choir Boy

Tarrell Alvin McCraney’s play Choir Boy, presented by Canadian Stage and Vancouver’s Arts Club Theatre, will start its Toronto run on November 8. A hit at London (England)’s Royal Court Theatre when it premiered in 2012, Choir Boy went on to equally acclaimed productions Off Broadway, at Chicago’s Steppenwolf Theatre, on Broadway, and a few years ago in Montreal directed by Mike Payette, who will be directing this new production, as well. An Oscar winner for Moonlight, McCraney has been amassing a reputation for brilliant theatrical storytelling, and this play is unique in that it is interwoven with gospel music and R & B sung a cappella throughout the show by the main characters. Having read the wonderful script, I spoke with director Payette as he was on his way from a rehearsal of Choir Boy to the opening of another show at Tarragon Theatre where he has recently taken on the role of artistic director.

One of the first questions I asked him was how he would categorize this play: “Not as the Tonys defined it (a

Wendalyn Bartley is a Toronto-based composer and electro-vocal sound artist. sounddreaming@gmail.com

Mike Payette
"play!" was his fast reply. In many more ways it could be “considered as a musical, but not a traditional musical,” he said. “The scope of the music is expressed very much by the voices themselves rather than by any instrumentation, as everything is sung a cappella, which is really, really challenging but also incredibly exciting and heightens the overall theatricality.”

Choir Boy is set within the walls of the prestigious African-American Charles R. Drew Prep School for Boys. Pharus, a junior at the start of the play, wants nothing more than to be the leader of the school’s celebrated gospel choir. While his wish comes true, the choir becomes the crucible for all the students for navigating their passage to adulthood while trying to live up to the school goals of becoming strong and ethical men. And here’s where the show crosses that line I mentioned earlier: the songs echo their struggles and hopes to the point where you could not do the play without them.

Payette’s take on the idea is perceptive: “The songs are the core of the storytelling, though in a fundamentally different way from the songs of a traditional musical. Usually songs advance the narrative, but here they speak to a larger spiritual and psychological connection to the characters. That’s not to say that the music doesn’t move the story along, but it has an extra layer because it is so ingrained in the history, and this notion of spiritual, ancestral and generational relationships with the music that all exist within the characters.”

“Usually songs advance the narrative, but here they speak to a larger spiritual and psychological connection to the characters. That’s not to say that the music doesn’t move the story along, but it has an extra layer.” — Mike Payette

Tied in with the music is a debate ignited by Pharus about the nature of the gospel songs themselves. He believes that whether they were or were not at one time coded messages shared between slaves seeking to escape to freedom, that now they are powerful vessels of spirituality and hope that speak as clearly to him and to his contemporaries as to anyone in the past.

All this makes Choir Boy music theatre in so many ways that Payette’s slightly aggrieved comment about the Tonys takes on added resonance. The 2013 Tony Awards nominated Choir Boy for Best Play, which it didn’t win, but also awarded a special Tony to Jason Michael Webb for ‘his outstanding vocal arrangements’ — a nod to the fact that this was something more than a play with music.

The play does not, however, come with a score attached – as Payette explained – nor with stage directions. So each production has to create its own score as well as its own staging and choreography. In each case this has to grow directly from the skills and personalities of each cast. In this case, Payette says, “we have cast five remarkable artists and we are essentially building their voices together into a choir depending on their ranges. The music will be unique. The choreography as well, is specific to the skills and personalities of this cast. It is a completely new production every time.”

Speaking of the power of the play and why he wanted to do it Payette continued, “The voice of the story is so clear: from the intersectionality of classes, of queerness, of masculinity, of brotherhood, of community and, at its core, the need we all feel to aspire to something greater than we are. I think it will touch many people in ways we have in common, and that is the kind of art that we need now.

And what kind of art is that? Well, with the music itself, the way he describes it here, as much a living character in the play as any of the individual players, it sounds a lot like music theatre to me.

The first, Paula Vogel’s 2013 play Indecent presented by Studio 180 and Mirvish at the CAA Theatre, was advertised as “combining music, song, dance and comedy” to tell the true story of how Solomon Asche’s Yiddish play God of Vengeance went from being a cultural smash across Europe (and New York’s Greenwich village in its original language), to being an infamous debacle on Broadway (with its story gutted and script translated into English) – to such an extent that the entire cast was arrested and jailed overnight for obscenity, and the show closed down. The story itself is fascinating, the tale of a ground-breaking play of the very early 20th century that dared to depict not only a religious Jewish man owning a brothel, but a moving lesbian love story between the man’s daughter and one of the “girls”. Vogel’s version of this history highlights the bravery of young playwright Asche and the transformative power of his writing – and therefore of all theatre on those who come across it – as well as the innate power of art and artists to survive the most horrific of times.

Music – wonderfully evocative klezmer music, played live – is used throughout the show to create the cultural and historical context. Apparently Vogel wrote her play by choosing specific pieces of music to inspire each scene or section of the piece as she was writing. In spite of this importance to the production of the music and music choices, I still felt on seeing it, though, that this was a play with music not music theatre, by which I mean that the story could have been told without the music and still have had its own power. (Indecent continues its run at the CAA Theatre until November 6. www.mirvish.com)

The second show, The Year of the Cello, is a brand-new work created by Theatre Passe Muraile artistic director and playwright Marjorie Chan with Music Picnic artistic producer and composer Njo Kong Kie. Presented in TPM’s newly renovated but still tiny Backspace, the setting was claustrophobic – perhaps intentionally, as the story we were immersed in was taking place in an apartment block in 1930s Hong Kong.

In essence a duet for actor and cellist, it reminded me, inevitably, of Tapestry Opera’s premiere of Luna Wolfe’s operatic two-hander Jacqueline in 2020, a haunting duet for soprano and cellist about Jacqueline du Pré. In the case of The Year of the Cello (which is equally haunting, the performer is an actor, the talented Rong Fu, playing Wen, who shares with the audience the story of her growing up with best friend Li-An, surviving the plague that decimates the city and falling in love, only to lose her best friend to a cellist – played on opening night by Bryan Holt (one half, with Amahl Arulanandam, of edgy cello duo VC2).
The wonderful experiment at the heart of this creation/production is that while the cellist is played by a cellist, he never speaks, only his cello does – and this is exactly right, for at the heart of the story is how Li-An’s heart is stolen by the music, by the sound of the cello heard across the streets of Hong Kong. We hear how she is drawn to it as if to a pied piper and how, when the cellist leaves, her only respite is to play records of cello music, notably Bach, over and over. We hear the Bach played live by the cellist as if in the time past, and even more powerfully (though perhaps taking a trifle too long) we hear the story of his love for Li-An in a new composition as he regains his ability to play after reconnecting with Wen. Is this music theatre? Definitely, yes. The show would not work without the music which is, in effect, as it is in Choir Boy, a character of its own in the story, evoking not only the past but the potential future for the characters we have come to care about. (The Year of the Cello plays until October 29. www.passemuraille.ca).

QUICK PICKS

OCT 25-NOV 27: Tina Fey’s Mean Girls, the musical, comes to the Princess of Wales Theatre on the heels of the stage version of the iconic Singin’ in the Rain. Fey has turned her teen cult classic movie into a popular Broadway musical that promises to provide a fun night out. Casey Nicholaw (Drowsy Chaperone) directs. mirvish.com.

NOV 4-13: The devoted following of the St. Anne’s Music and Drama Society in Toronto’s West End will be delighted to know that MADS is coming back from their pandemic shutdown with a live production of a lesser known Gilbert and Sullivan work: The Sorcerer. stannesmads.com.

NOV 8-10 (Koerner Hall): Music director and master music arranger Reza Jacobs bids farewell after 15 years to the UnCovered concert series this year with UnCovered: The music of ABBA, the Musical Stage Company’s annual celebration of songs as vehicles of story. A new mix of actor-singers will perform with the live band this year, including the always luminous Vanessa Sears. info@musicalstagecompany.com

NOV 9-20: The Golden Record. Mike Ross, Soulpepper’s Slaight Family Director of Music, brings back the company’s superb song-and-storytelling concert series with a new show inspired by NASA’s “The Voyager Golden Record”, a phonograph message that NASA sent out into space in an effort to communicate the nature of our world to any extraterrestrials who might find it. The usual band of expert singing storytellers reunites, joined by writer Sarah Wilson and tap dancer Travis Knights. Soulpepper.com.

NOV 9-DEC 23: For those wanting to celebrate the holiday season early the Shaw Festival is bringing back its very musical A Christmas Carol beginning on November 9, as well as a new large-scale production of Irving Berlin’s White Christmas on November 18. White Christmas will be directed like last year’s hit Holiday Inn, by Kate Hennig, and choreographed by the wonderfully imaginative Allison Plamondon. Both shows run until December 23. shawfest.ca.

Jennifer Parr is a Toronto-based director, dramaturge, fight director and acting coach, brought up from a young age on a rich mix of musicals, Shakespeare and new Canadian plays.
The new International Orchestra Series announced October 6 is an exciting addition to the Royal Conservatory’s dance card. The upcoming first visit to Toronto by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra (their first since 1914) is an intriguing prospect that prompts a few questions. Who better than Mervon Mehta, the Conservatory’s executive director of performing arts, to fill us in?

WN: How long has the idea for the new International Orchestra Series been percolating in your mind?

MM: A lifetime! Since the hall opened the biggest programmatic item I have missed is the ability to bring major orchestras to Toronto. Of course, we have always had the Royal Conservatory Orchestra, and the COC, TSO and National Ballet have played here, but bringing a band such as the CSO has always been a dream.

Before assuming your post at the Royal Conservatory in 2009, you spent 1994 to 2001 booking music for the Ravinia Festival, the summer home of the Chicago Symphony. You clearly didn’t burn any bridges there. How did it come to pass that the CSO – one of the world’s preeminent orchestras – will be the first international orchestra to play in the new series in Koerner Hall next February 1 and 2?

As we were developing our plans to launch the International Orchestra Series in the 2023/24 season, I got a call from an old colleague in Chicago. They had planned an Asian tour for winter 2023 but decided not to go due to lingering COVID issues. They had to fill a couple of weeks of orchestra services and were interested to see if we had interest. Of course, we had to find a way to say yes.

What were the greatest challenges in curating the new series?

It is all about the finances. In order to fit these orchestras, we use our stage extension, which cuts our seating capacity to about 950 seats. Touring orchestras of 85-100 players are not inexpensive so we have to figure out ticket pricing that would work, get deals on hotels, determine programs that would fit on the stage etc. etc. Even with higher than usual ticket prices, there will still be a large gap and we are working with several donors and corporations to help us fill that gap.

And what most excites you?

We can’t wait to hear the CSO’s big sound in the hall. We may have to tighten the roof shingles when they are done.

Will there be more symphony orchestra concerts in the 2022/2023 season? Do you anticipate more than one visiting orchestra per season in the future?

No one else in 2022/23, although we have some chamber orchestras (Bach Collegium and Chineke Orchestra) and several Royal Conservatory Orchestra and Taylor Academy orchestra concerts. We are hoping for two in 2023/24, stay tuned!

How many musicians will perform in the CSO concerts?

Around 90.

How many people can fit onto the Koerner Hall stage?

Around 90.

On February 1, 2023, RCM presents the Chicago Symphony Orchestra performing Beethoven’s Symphony No. 7 in A Major, op. 92 and Prokofiev’s Symphony No. 5 in B-flat Major, Op. 100. On February 2, 2023, the CSO will perform Beethoven’s Coriolan Overture, Op. 62 and Symphony No. 8 in F Major, Op. 93; Liadov’s The Enchanted Lake, Op. 62; and Mussorgsky’s Pictures at an Exhibition. The concerts conclude Riccardo Muti’s final tour with the CSO as his 13-year term as music director expires in 2023.
But meanwhile ...

NOV 12, 7:30PM; NOV 12, 8PM; NOV 16, 8PM: Three concerts in five days all featuring one of the most celebrated works in the cello repertoire, Dvořák’s Cello Concerto in B Minor – the coincidence jumped out at us from the listings. Named “Canada’s next big Cello star” by CBC Music, Cameron Cruzman joins the Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra and guest conductor, Alexander Prior, for the Dvořák concerto (Nov 12 at 7:30).

Daniel Warren conducts the Kitchener-Waterloo Community Orchestra with the Penderecki String Quartet’s cellist, Katie Schlaikjer, as soloist (Nov 12 at 8pm). And as part of a gala celebration marking the TSO’s centennial and his 50th performance with the Orchestra, cellist Yo-Yo Ma and TSO music director, Gustavo Gimeno, perform Dvořák’s masterful concerto before an already-sold-out Roy Thomson Hall (Nov 16).

NOV 13, 2PM; NOV 15, 8PM; NOV 17, 8PM: The Lafayette String Quartet is a rarity, an all-female ensemble consisting, after 36 years, of its four founding members. The New York Times called them “Splendid... powerful and riveting in every way.” Most of their time together has been centred in Victoria, BC where they have been artists-in-residence at the University of Victoria since 1991; they will be retiring in August 2023.

Celebrate with them as they perform the same program – Mozart, Abigail Richardson-Schulte and Borodin – at the Pavilion of the Art Gallery of Hamilton (Nov 13); presented by the Kitchener-Waterloo Chamber Music Society (Nov 15); and presented by Music for TSO’s centennial and his 50th performance with the Orchestra, cellist Yo-Yo Ma and TSO music director, Gustavo Gimeno, perform Dvořák’s masterful concerto before an already-sold-out Roy Thomson Hall (Nov 16).

NOV 17, 12PM; DEC 4, 3PM: Scott St. John (violin) joins Rachel Mercer (cello) and Angela Park (piano) in a free OOC noon-hour concert of Haydn and Kevin Lau (Nov 17) and follow-up in Heliconian Hall with an expanded program – presented by Syrinx Concerts (Dec 4).

NOV 17, 1:30PM: The Women’s Musical Club of Toronto’s Music in the Afternoon series continues with the Despax Quartet making a rare appearance in Toronto. Formed in 2003, the quartet consists of two brothers and two sisters based in Gatineau, Quebec; their appearance is part of WMCT’s 125th year celebration. Their program begins with one of Haydn’s greatest chamber works, his Op.76, No.1, continues with Ravel’s Quartet in F Major and concludes with Schoenberg’s Romantic masterpiece, Verklärte Nacht (Transfigured Night), for which they are joined by Milena Pajaro-van de Stadt, viola, and Brian Manker, cello.

NOV 19 & 20, 8PM: Italian-German-American violinist Augustin Hadelich was named Musical America’s 2018 Instrumentalist of the Year. A musician’s musician, he is consistently cited worldwide for his phenomenal technique, soulful approach and insightful interpretations. On November 19 and 20, he and the TSO, with music director Gustavo Gimeno, will perform Sibelius’ majestic Violin Concerto. Gimeno and the orchestra then look at two Quatuor Despax Quartet

RAOUL MANUEL SCHNELL

RAOUL MANUEL SCHNELL

FRANCES LITMAN & MILES LOWRY

R-L: Scott St. John, Angela Park, Rachel Mercer

RAOUL MANUEL SCHNELL

LAFAYETTE STRING QUARTET

Lafayette String Quartet

L-R: Scott St. John, Angela Park, Rachel Mercer

LAFAYETTE STRING QUARTET

FRANCES LITMAN & MILES LOWRY
sides of the waltz – the glitter of Strauss’ Der Rosenkavalier and the searing indictment of WWI that propels Ravel’s La valse.

NOV 23 & 24, 8PM; NOV 22, 7:30PM; NOV 23, 8PM: Legendary pianist/teacher Sergei Babayan – he has 54 concertos in his repertoire – teams up with conductor Dalia Stasevska and the TSO for Tchaikovsky’s beloved Piano Concerto No.1. Born in Ukraine, Stasevska emigrated to Finland when she was five, and, according to the Los Angeles Times, has now entered the ever-growing ranks of top-ranking Finnish conductors of all generations. In Finland, Stasevska is music director of the Lahti Symphony Orchestra, one of the country’s finest, and is also musical royalty, having married Sibelius’ great-grandson, the eclectic electric bassist of the Finnish power metal group Stratovarius and an intriguing composer in his own right. She keeps busy as principal guest conductor of the BBC Symphony Orchestra. The post-intermission is devoted to Tchaikovsky’s radical Symphony No.6 “Pathétique.”

DEC 2, 8PM: Grammy Award-winning pianist Daniil Trifonov – named Musical America’s Artist of the Year in 2019 – returns to Koerner Hall to perform works by Tchaikovsky, Schumann, Mozart, Ravel and Scriabin. Marrying technical prowess with a unique sensitivity, Trifonov is at the top of the generation of pianists now moving into their 30s. Coincidentally, his December 2 recital comes just ten days after his former teacher, Sergei Babayan, performs with the TSO. Babayan taught Trifonov from 2009 to 2015 at the Cleveland Institute of Music. In a 2018 interview with Interlude.hk, Babayan spoke about his pupil:

“He is a dream for a teacher – a real diamond. It’s a one-time life opportunity for someone to have that kind of student...When he plays, he gives so much of himself. Sometimes I’m scared he’s burning that candle too intensely.”

IN MEMORIAM

Music Toronto mourns the passing of Geoff Nuttall, first violin of our beloved St. Lawrence String Quartet, on Oct. 19th. Their concert for us, scheduled for Dec 1st, marked a 30-year relationship. Geoff was an extraordinary musician and a remarkable person. We share with Geoff’s family, colleagues, friends, students and indeed the entire music world, deep sadness, profound loss, and gratitude for his spirit, energy and joy. Please see the quartet’s own statement at www.slsq.com.

Paul Ennis is the managing editor of The WholeNote.

---

USUALLY CLUBS (BUT NOT THIS TIME)

JAZZ IN THE CONCERT HALL

COlIn Story

Koerner Hall is, most assuredly, not a club. Completed in 2009 as the centrepiece of the Royal Conservatory’s massive mid-2000s renovation, the venue’s plush seating, acoustic clarity and ligneous splendour have made it a major destination for all manner of art music. Unlike the venues normally covered in this column, typical club activities – hooting at the stage, drinking in one’s seat, posting shaky Instagram clips of instrumental solos with fire emojis in the middle of a song – are frowned upon, though still possible (other than drinking in one’s seat), with a little determination and disregard for concert-hall decorum.

Ravi Coltrane

In November, Koerner hosts two notable jazz concerts. Up first is Ravi Coltrane, who brings “Cosmic Music: A Contemporary Exploration into the Music of John and Alice Coltrane” to the hall on November 12. The last names are not coincidentally similar: Ravi is the son of John and Alice, and has gracefully navigated a career playing jazz on the tenor and soprano saxophones, the same instruments whose sounds his father revolutionized. Though deeply influenced by both John and Alice’s legacy, Ravi – a Grammy-nominated saxophonist in his own right who has worked with artists such as Chick Corea, Terence Blanchard and his cousin, the producer Flying Lotus – brings his own unique voice to his improvisatory practice. With six albums under his own name and countless others with the likes of jazz-world luminaries such as Steve Coleman and Jeff “Tain” Watts, as well as newer-generation artists like harpist Brandee Younger and pianist Glenn Zaleski, Coltrane has made his own indelible mark on American music. On November 12, he will be joined by a stellar young band, which will feature pianist Gadi Lehavi, bassist Rashaan Carter and drummer Elé Howell.

Tigran Hamasyan

On November 19, another relatively young musician takes the stage: Tigran Hamasyan, an Armenian pianist whose music combines a deep knowledge of jazz harmony and improvisation with Armenian folk melodies, prog rock and other influences. Hamasyan’s concert is programmed under Koerner Hall’s Global Music series, but it could just as easily fall under the category of jazz; Hamasyan’s pedigree in the genre is second to none. A 2006 winner of the Herbie Hancock Institute of Jazz International Competition (formerly known the Thelonious Monk Competition), his newest album, Standart, features bassist Matt Brewer, drummer Justin Brown and special guest artists Mark Turner (tenor sax), Ambrose Akinmusire (trumpet), and saxophonist Joshua Redman (Akinmusire and Redman were also Monk Competition winners, in 2007 and 1991, respectively).
Tigran Hamasyan

As a performer, Hamasyan is deeply engaged in his practice, with an intensity and focus that imbue moments of relatively simple playing with a great depth of feeling. He often sings, especially in Armenian, and makes used of common extended techniques on the acoustic piano. He is also a musician for whom humour and insouciance go hand-in-hand with earnest artistic expression. One of his most-viewed videos on his YouTube channel, a performance of his original song Vardavar, is captured outdoors in a mountainous setting, at either sunrise or sunset (one suspects the latter, knowing something of the sleeping patterns of musicians). The setup is decidedly ad hoc; upright bass and acoustic guitar are accompanied by cymbal, drum case, and, for Hamasyan, a Casio keyboard and a Hello Kitty acoustic toy piano. Joining him on this trio tour, as per his social media channels, are drummer Jeremy Dutton and either Matt Brewer or Rick Rosato on bass (Rosato, who hails from Montreal, is the safe bet).

Majd Sekkar

Opening for Hamasyan at Koerner Hall is Toronto-based clarinetist Majd Sekkar, originally from Syria. Sekkar’s selection as Hamasyan’s opening act is an apposite choice; like Hamasyan, Sekkar’s music blends jazz with folk melodies, while bringing a high level of technical skill to his practice. (Sekkar is also a member of the Canadian Arabic Orchestra, an ensemble that plays at Koerner earlier in the month, on November 13, in concert with the singer Marwan Khoury.) Sekkar appears at Koerner, on November 19, with his quartet. Structurally, Sekkar’s band is strongly rooted in jazz, with a penchant for propulsive grooves and responsive, interactive comping. To this format, however, Sekkar brings a distinctive harmonic approach, using a variety of chord/scale sounds (such as the double harmonic scale, a system common in Arabic, Indian and other regions).

Colin Story is a jazz guitarist, writer and teacher based in Toronto. He can be reached at www.colinstory.com, on Instagram and on Twitter.

Majd Sekkar

Colin Story is a jazz guitarist, writer and teacher based in Toronto. He can be reached at www.colinstory.com, on Instagram and on Twitter.
Meanwhile, BACK AT CHALMERS HOUSE

MAX CHRISTIE

Three weeks to the day after attending Chalmers House (home of the Canadian Music Centre) for the launch of John Beckwith’s book Musical Annals, I was back in the same space (though arranged in a more intimate horseshoe pattern for the attendees), for the return of Edana Higham and Zac Pulak, aka SHHH!!, who had come in from Ottawa to perform at the Beckwith launch, and were back to launch their own opus – SHHH!! Ensemble’s first CD, Meanwhile. I’m sure I will find myself at more Chalmers House events like these as things continue opening up. The otherwise obscured work of many fine composers and performers of Canadian music needs this kind of shelter, immune to the vagaries of public demand.

Chalmers Hall, added to the main floor of the House in 2012, is perfectly sized for the kind of events like the two launches in September: events that are great for listening and also for meeting and mingling among players, writers, composers and the interested public. The usual business of the CMC contributes to the ambience: upstairs, the ever-growing library (25,000 scores and counting) is being updated and digitized daily; and the CMC’s recording arm, Centrediscs, boasts just under 300 releases.

Meanwhile, as it happens, is on the Analekta label, and the title track, by John Beckwith, is the piece they played in his honour at the book launch. I’m starting to get familiar with the work now, and like it more and more as I do. I also like that this virtuoso duo are so agile and inventive in the promotion of the composers they commission. And what’s not to like about the fact that Meanwhile was their very first commission. A family connection gave them the courage to ask Beckwith to write for them (Higham’s parents and John are old friends), they told me, and we can all be glad he agreed. Meanwhile reveals something new every time one hears it. I wrote of their performance at the earlier event that they play it like they own it, and as Pulak put it, they keep finding new depths in the music as well. That’s the mark of a great piece: we all “own” Meanwhile, once we’ve heard it, and can make of it what we will on each successive listen.

During the “meeting and mingling” I mentioned earlier, Higham and Pulak shared anecdotes – about the music on the disc, about their activities before, during, and since the Covid shutdown, and their plans for the next project, soon to get off the ground, in collaboration with Frank Horvat. Expect a single piece, possibly in linking segments, concerning itself with the end of the current geological period! Someone suggested a nod to Carrie Fisher’s memoir with the title “Postcards from the Edge of the Holocene,” but I don’t imagine that’ll fly.

As for the listening part, around 30 of us were treated to selections amounting to about half the material on the disc. Left out were Kelly-Marie Murphy’s solo percussion work Dr. Blue’s Incredible Bone-Shaking Drill Engine and Micheline Roï’s Grieving the Doubts of Angels. Much of Pulak’s work on the other pieces involved metals, and the wood of the marimba, so it was great to get to hear Murphy’s piece on the disc, all booming skin and rattling bone. (They had transported all their gear for the launch from Ottawa in their own vehicle, and since drums fill a lot of space, they left them at home, they explained.)

They had released Meanwhile in their home base of Ottawa a few nights before, and seemed at ease at the CMC; it’s more cozy and intimate than the auditorium at the NAC. I loved being so close to all of the instruments: to hear prepared piano effects under Higham’s careful hands, then watch as she yanked a leather strap free of the lower strings where it had dampened them till then, in a violent gesture eliciting a harsh whoosh. She finished by winding it into a roll as the piece ended. That was in Leather, by Monica Pearce, which also features a new metal instrument, a hybrid of cowbell and crotale and cymbal, characterized by both splash and pitch. Pulak is above all a melodist, in this piece in particular, in the Beckwith, in general, and in spades.

They played Noora Nakhaei’s Echoes of the Past, a piece commissioned jointly by the Ottawa International Writers Festival and Ottawa New Music Creators. The piece responds to the difficult and beautiful collaboration between Martha and Christina Baillie in Sister Language (Pedlar Press), a compelling and idiosyncratic co-autobiography. A very gentle, understated and sweet response it is. They also played Spirit Gradient, by Jocelyn Morlock, featuring a rocking left hand from Higham and a hint of Vince Guaraldi’s Charlie Brown theme. They played Like a Fist to the Jaw, from John Gordon Armstrong’s The Angel’s Share, which shares a thematic reference to spirits with the Morlock, but in this case not those enclosed in a carpenter’s level but rather imbibed from a glass. Scotch Whisky is the reference point, specifically tasting notes for Ardbeg. I got the reference, especially once the high punchy opening pitches give way to a slow rolling tidal effect evoking the pitching seas off the Isle of Oban.

Poised: when I interviewed SHHH!! in the early days of the pandemic, they seemed well-positioned to survive the shutdown, and they’ve since hit the ground running as live performances return. Alison McTavish, who serves as their agent, says “They work so hard; it makes my job easy,” which seems like equal parts modesty and truth. They’re ready to carry the momentum through the end of the current geological era, or at least for the foreseeable future. I doubt anything short of a geological cataclysm will shut them down.

For them, and others like them, places like the CMC’s Chalmers House, and all too few others like it, provide vital and hospitable shelter along the trail.

Max Christie is a Toronto-based musician and writer. He performs on principal clarinet of the National Ballet Orchestra when restrictions allow, and otherwise spends too much time on Twitter. @chxamaxhc.

THE AGA KHAN MUSEUM’S DUENDE FLAMENCO FESTIVAL 2022

Ignite your passion

NOVEMBER 13—20

To purchase tickets visit: agakhanmuseum.org/duende2022

Presented in partnership with With the support of Event listings are free of charge to artists, venues and presenters.

This issue contains event listings from November 1 to December 13, 2022.

LISTINGS IN THIS ISSUE

• Beginning on this page you will find live and livestream daily listings for events with an announced date and time that one could circle on a calendar in order to “be there.” Listing requests that were received at the time of going to press are included on these pages.

• Our listing requests continue to arrive every day and are updated and published each weekend in The WholeNote WEEKLY LISTINGS UPDATE e-letter (see below for further information).

How to List

1. Use the convenient online form at thewholenote.com/applylistings OR
2. Email listings to listings@thewholenote.com.

Please note, we do not take listings over the phone.

Deadlines

Weekly: Eligible listings received by 6pm Tuesday, each week, will be included in The WholeNote WEEKLY LISTINGS UPDATE e-letter sent to registered readers the following Sunday. Listings received for the Weekly Listings Update are simultaneously posted to JUST ASK, our searchable online listings database. The weekly listings update looks five to six weeks into the future on an ongoing basis.

Print: Our next print issue, Volume 28 no.3 covers from December 6 to February 14. The print submission deadline for that issue will be November 22.

Readers are encouraged to register for the Weekly Listings update, or to check our online listings regularly for new listings or updates to listings previously submitted. Each weekly update looks 5-6 weeks into the future.

Register for the weekly updates at thewholenote.com/newsletter
REMEMBRANCE DAY PRAYER SERVICE
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 7:00 PM
YORKMINSTER PARK BAPTIST CHURCH
1585 Yonge St. (1 block north of St. Clair Ave.)

MUSICAL GUEST:
John McDermott

FEATURING:
IONA PASSAGE: Sharlene Wallace, harp
Anne Lindsay, violin
Eric Robertson, piano

IONA REMEMBRANCE DAY
Saturday, November 5
8:00 pm
Yorkminster Park Baptist Church
1585 Yonge Street at Heath Street

SPECIAL GUEST
Heather Bambrick, Vocalist

WITH:
Stu Harrison, Piano
Pat Collins, Bass
Chase Sanborn, Trumpet/Flugelhorn

FEATURING:
Rob Crabtree, Piper
Lark Popov, Piano
Colleen Burns, Narrator
Choirs and Organ
Eric N. Robertson, Conductor

ADMISSION FREE - DONATIONS WELCOME

WWW.9SPARROWSARTS.ORG

NINE SPARROWS ARTS FOUNDATION PRESENTS
A CONCERT OF REMEMBRANCE SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 2022 | 8:00 pm
Yorkminster Park Baptist Church
1585 Yonge Street at Heath Street

IONA REMEMBRANCE DAY PRAYER SERVICE
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 7:00 PM
YORKMINSTER PARK BAPTIST CHURCH
1585 Yonge St. (1 block north of St. Clair Ave.)

MUSICAL GUEST:
John McDermott

FEATURING:
IONA PASSAGE: Sharlene Wallace, harp
Anne Lindsay, violin
Eric Robertson, piano

Yorkminster Park
BAPTIST CHURCH

November 1 - December 13, 2022 | 29

2022-10-28 10:00:04 PM
Sunday November 6

1. 10:00 AM: Rose Theatre. Brampton Music Theatre. Cinderella. See Nov 3. Also Nov 10, 11, 12. Start times vary.

2. 1:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Platypus Theatre’s How the Gimquat Found Her Song. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $29. Also 4pm.

4. 6:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Platypus Theatre’s How the Gimquat Found Her Song. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $29. Also 4pm.

Tuesday November 8

1. 12:00 noon: Canadian Opera Company. Vocal Series: Rebkows Family Fellowship Showcase. vocalists from the 21/22 Rebkows Family Fellowship and International Performance Residency Program at The Royal Conservatory’s Glenn Gould School. Richard Bradshaw Amphitheatre, Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts, 145 Queen St. W. Free.

Wednesday November 9

2. 12:00 noon: Canadian Opera Company. Vocal Series: Rebkows Family Fellowship Showcase. vocalists from the 21/22 Rebkows Family Fellowship and International Performance Residency Program at The Royal Conservatory’s Glenn Gould School. Richard Bradshaw Amphitheatre, Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts, 145 Queen St. W. Free.

Thursday November 10

2. 12:00 noon: Musical Met. Thursday Noon at Met Concert. Works by Messiaen, Bach, Alwood, and others. Rashaan Alwood, organ. Metropolitan United Church (Toronto), 56 Queen St. E. www.munited.ca. Free. LIVE & STREAMED.

5. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Edmonton Conducts The Planets. Rossini: Overture To la gazza ladra; Mendelssohn: Concert Piece No.2; Coleridge-Taylor: Ballad in a; Holst: The Planets. Erin Abramovitz, clarinet; Miles Jacques, bassett horn, Toronto Children’s Chorus, Peter Oundjian, conductor. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 10, 12.

6. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. United Church (Waterloo), 16 William St. W. 519-589-1809 or www.ticketscene.ca/kwksm. $35, $30 (student); $15 (recommended).

7. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Plastik Theatre’s How the Gimquat Found Her Song. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $29. Also 11:30pm, 12:30pm, 7:30pm, 8:00pm, 9:30pm. From $46. Also Nov 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18 & 19. Start times vary.

9. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. United Church (Waterloo), 16 William St. W. 519-589-1809 or www.ticketscene.ca/kwksm. $35, $30 (student); $15 (recommended).

10. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. United Church (Waterloo), 16 William St. W. 519-589-1809 or www.ticketscene.ca/kwksm. $35, $30 (student); $15 (recommended).

11. 8:00 PM: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. United Church (Waterloo), 16 William St. W. 519-589-1809 or www.ticketscene.ca/kwksm. $35, $30 (student); $15 (recommended).
Fauré & Duruflé Requiem
Guelph — Nov. 11
St. Catharines — Nov. 13

Saturday November 12
10:30am: Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. Singation: “We Are Toronto”. A reading of SATB choral pieces by composers who call (or have called) Toronto home. Jamie Hillman, workshop leader. Yorkminster Park Baptist Church, 1855 Yonge St. www.tmchoir.org. $10.

1:00: Rose Theatre. Brampton Music Theatre: Cinderella. See Nov. 3.

2:00: Canadian Stage. Choir Boy. See Nov. 8. Also Nov 15, 16, 17 & 18. Start times vary.

2:00: St. Anne's Music & Drama Society. The Sorcerer. See Nov. 4. Also Nov 13/15 (op.90).

3:00: RESOUND Choir. RESOUND Remembers. Durufle: Requiem; Marie-Claire Saindon: Emmane-moi; Diane-Moore; Evan Dey; For the Fallen; Margaret Bond: St. Francis身边: Prayers; Stephen Chatain: Remember Me. RESOUND Choir: Chamber Orchestra. St. George’s Anglican Church (Oshawa), S Centre St. Oshawa. 905-718-0535. $15-$30. Also Nov 12/13.

3:00: Smoke Show BBQ & Brew. Wintergarden Orchestra. Smoke Show BBQ and Brew. 744 Queen Pleasant Rd. $15.

7:00: New Adventures in Sound Art (NAISA). Immersions and Resonances. NAISA North Media Arts Centre, 313 Highway 104, South River. 705-396-0800. $12.

7:00: RESOUND Choir. RESOUND Remembers. Durufle: Requiem; Marie-Claire Saindon: Emmane-moi; Diane-Moore; Evan Dey; For the Fallen; Margaret Bond: St. Francis身边: Prayers; Stephen Chatain: Remember Me. RESOUND Choir: Chamber Orchestra. St. George’s Anglican Church (Oshawa), S Centre St. Oshawa. 905-718-0535. $15-$30. Also Nov 12/13.

7:30: Grand Philharmonic Choir Chamber Singers. Durufle Requiem. Mark Vuorinen, conductor. St. John the Evangelist Church (Kitchener), 23 Water St. N, Kitchener. info@grandphilchoir.com. $31; $19(students); $9(child/ high school; seniors).

8:00: Musical Stage Company. The Sorcerer. See Nov. 4. Also Nov 13. Also Nov 12. Start times vary.

Friday November 11
11:00am: Hamilton Philharmonic Orchestra. Talk & Tea: Prokofiev. Stage Door @ FirstOntario Concert Hall, 10 MacNab St. S., Hamilton. 905-505-7755. $14. Talk about Mozart, light refreshments, sneeze peak at HPO rehearsal.

1:30: St. Anne’s Music & Drama Society. The Sorcerer. See Nov 4. Also Nov 12/13 (op.122pm).

10:00am: Burlington Performing Arts Centre. The AC/DC Show: Canada. 440 Locust St., Burlington. 416-688-2152 or bpa boxoffice@burlingtonpac.ca/events/acdc-show-canada. $55.

10:00am: Canadian Stage. Choir Boy. See Nov. 8. Also Nov 15, 16, 17, 18 & 19. Start times vary.

Live or Online

| Nov 1 to Dec 13, 2022 |

- 2:00: St. Anne's Music & Drama Society. The Sorcerer. See Nov 4.

Monday November 14

- 12:15: St. Andrew’s Presbyterian Church (Kitchener). Douglas Haas Legacy Concerts. Stirling Strings Duo: Cynthia Steele, cello; Tom Steele, guitar. 54 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-578-4430. Live & LIVESTREAM.

Tuesday November 15

- 12:00 noon: Canadian Opera Company. Instrumental Series: Will to Live. Prokofiev: Piano Sonata No.4 in c Op.29; Liszt: La vallée d’Obermann; and works by Chopin and Hamilton. Philipp Prud’homme, piano. Richard Bradshaw Amphitheatre, Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts, 145 Queen St. W. Free.
- 12:10: Nine Sparrows Arts Foundation. Lunchtime Chamber Music. Jordana Kleinman, flute; Stirling Strings Duo: Cynthia Steele, cello; Tom Steele, guitar. 54 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-578-4430. Live & LIVESTREAM.
- 6:00: Canadian Stage. Choir Boy. See Nov 8. Also Nov 16, 17 & 18. Start times vary.
- 8:00: Kitchener-Waterloo Chamber Music Society. Chamber Music Concert, Mozart: String Quartet No.22 in B-flat K589; Abigail Richardson-Schulte: New Work; Borodin: String Quartet No.2 in D. Lafayette Quartet. First United Church, 261 William St. W., Waterloo. 519-589-1809 or www.ticketscene.ca/kwcons. $35, $20 (student).

Wednesday November 16

- 12:15: St. Andrew’s Presbyterian Church (Kitchener). Douglas Haas Legacy Concerts. Emma Allen, cello; Matthew Gartsheine, piano. 54 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-578-4430. Live & LIVESTREAM.
- 12:30: ORGANIX Concerts. Sebastian Moreno, organ. All Saints Kingsway Anglican Church, 2850 Bloor St. W. 416-571-6880 or organixconcerts.ca. Freewill offering ($20 suggested).
- 1:00: Canadian Stage. Choir Boy. See Nov 8. Also Nov 17, 18 & 19. Start times vary.
- 7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. U of T Jazz Jim Lewis’ Jzzet. Walter Hall, Edward Johnson Building, University of Toronto, 80 Queen St. W. 416-978-3750 or www.music.utoronto.ca. Free.
- 8:00: Canadian Stage. Choir Boy. See Nov 8. Also Nov 17, 18 & 19. Start times vary.
- 8:00: Kitchener-Waterloo Symphony. Christmasriage: A Baroque Christmas. Schmelzer: Sonata Natalia1 a 3 C. Teilemann: Festive Suite in A; Corrette: Symphonie No.4 in d, No.5 in a; Torelli: Concerto grosso in g (Christmas Concert); and other works. Capella Intima, vocal quartet; Simon Rocard, conductor; Matthew Kalyakin, kuratur. Centre in the Square, 101 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-745-4711 or 1-888-745-4717. $37. Also Nov 18, 19.
- 8:00: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Celebrate 100. A Gala Celebration with Yo-Yo Ma. Mowrtz: Carnival Overture; Bernstein: Symphonic Dances from West Side Story; Dvorak: Cello Concerto; George Paul/Jeremy Dutcher: Honour Song. Yo-Yo Ma, cello; Special appearance by Jeremy Dutcher; Gustavo Gimeno, conductor; Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $110. SOLD OUT.

Thursday November 17

Friday November 18

- 7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. Vocalis 1. Another Night at the Opera. Walter Hall, Edward Johnson Building, University of Toronto, 80 Queen St. W. 416-978-3750 or www.music.utoronto.ca. Free.
Fauré & Durufle Requiem

Toronto — Nov. 20

Robert Cooper, chorus director; Suzy Smith, music director and pianist. Jane Mallet Theatre, St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts, 27 Front St. E. www.operainconcert.com or 416-366-7723 or 1-800-708-6754. From $36-$77.

7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. UTSO Graduate Conductors Concert. Walter Hart, Edward Johnson Building, University of Toronto, 80 Queen’s Park. 416-978-3750 or www.music.utoronto.ca. Free.

8:00: Evergreen Club Gamelan. A Baroque Christmas. A reviewer said, “The baroque gamelan ensemble has come to the stage and has brought with it an aura of the Baroque era.” Toronto — Nov. 20

TICKETS $50 / $38
St Lawrence Centre for the Arts | 27 Front St E, Toronto
www.stlc.com 416-366-7723 1-800-708-6754
TICKETS ON SALE NOW!

MUSIC DIRECTOR

Suzy Smith

Robert Cooper and the OIC Chorus

NOV. 20, 2022

FEATURING

Vania Chan
Owen McCausland
Amy Moodie
Holly Chaplin

Sunday November 20

2:30: VOICEBOX: Opera in Concert. Lucio Silla. Music by W. A. Mozart. Owen McCausland, tenor (Lucio Silla); Vania Chan, soprano; Amy Moodie, soprano; and Holly Chaplin, soprano; Voicebox: Opera in Concert Chorus;

8:00: Evergreen Club Gamelan. A Baroque Christmas. A reviewer said, “The baroque gamelan ensemble has come to the stage and has brought with it an aura of the Baroque era.” Toronto — Nov. 20

TICKETS $50 / $38
St Lawrence Centre for the Arts | 27 Front St E, Toronto
www.stlc.com 416-366-7723 1-800-708-6754
TICKETS ON SALE NOW!

MUSIC DIRECTOR

Suzy Smith

Robert Cooper and the OIC Chorus

NOV. 20, 2022

FEATURING

Vania Chan
Owen McCausland
Amy Moodie
Holly Chaplin

Sunday November 20

2:30: VOICEBOX: Opera in Concert. Lucio Silla. Music by W. A. Mozart. Owen McCausland, tenor (Lucio Silla); Vania Chan, soprano; Amy Moodie, soprano; and Holly Chaplin, soprano; Voicebox: Opera in Concert Chorus;
UofT Opera Presents...

A Comedic Trilogy

HIN UND ZURÜCK
Paul Hindemith

Monsieur Choufleur
Jacques Offenbach

Conductor: Sandra Horst
Director: Michael Patrick Albano
Set & Lighting Design: Fred Perruzza

MacMillan Theatre, Faculty of Music, University of Toronto

Thursday, Nov.24 | 7:30pm
Friday, Nov.25 | 7:30pm
Saturday, Nov.26 | 7:30pm
Sunday, Nov.27 | 2:30pm

This production is made possible in part by a generous gift from Marina Yoshida.

Tickets: Weston Family Box Office at the Royal Conservatory, 273 Bloor St W., Toronto 416-408-0208 uoftopera.ca

---

LIVE OR ONLINE Nov 1 to Dec 13, 2022

8:00: Bill Gilliam & Margaret Maria. imaginary Familiars & Marybli. Bill Gilliam, piano; Margaret Maria, cello. Array-Space, 155 Walnut Ave. www.facebook.com/billgili

EPO!!

Fireworks of Sound

Conductor: Sandra Horst
Director: Michael Patrick Albano
Set & Lighting Design: Fred Perruzza

MacMillan Theatre, Faculty of Music, University of Toronto

Thursday, Nov.24 | 7:30pm
Friday, Nov.25 | 7:30pm
Saturday, Nov.26 | 7:30pm
Sunday, Nov.27 | 2:30pm

This production is made possible in part by a generous gift from Marina Yoshida.

Tickets: Weston Family Box Office at the Royal Conservatory, 273 Bloor St W., Toronto 416-408-0208 uoftopera.ca

---

2. Sergei Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2

Concerto: Sandra Horst
Director: Michael Patrick Albano
Set & Lighting Design: Fred Perruzza

MacMillan Theatre, Faculty of Music, University of Toronto

Thursday, Nov.24 | 7:30pm
Friday, Nov.25 | 7:30pm
Saturday, Nov.26 | 7:30pm
Sunday, Nov.27 | 2:30pm

This production is made possible in part by a generous gift from Marina Yoshida.

Tickets: Weston Family Box Office at the Royal Conservatory, 273 Bloor St W., Toronto 416-408-0208 uoftopera.ca

---

3. Jacques Offenbach of Sound

Concerto: Sandra Horst
Director: Michael Patrick Albano
Set & Lighting Design: Fred Perruzza

MacMillan Theatre, Faculty of Music, University of Toronto

Thursday, Nov.24 | 7:30pm
Friday, Nov.25 | 7:30pm
Saturday, Nov.26 | 7:30pm
Sunday, Nov.27 | 2:30pm

This production is made possible in part by a generous gift from Marina Yoshida.

Tickets: Weston Family Box Office at the Royal Conservatory, 273 Bloor St W., Toronto 416-408-0208 uoftopera.ca
Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto No.1, Symphony No.6 ("Pathétique"). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 24, 25(7:30pm), 26.

Thursday November 24

● 12:00 noon: Music at Met. Thursday Noon at Met Concert. Works by Franck, Borowski, and Clokey. Aaron James, organ; Jonathan Oldengarm, piano. Metropolitan United Church (Toronto), 50 Queen St. E. www.metunited.ca. Free. STREAM & LIVESTREAM.

● 7:00: Massey Hall. Manic Street Preachers and Sude. 178 Victoria St. 416-872-4255. From $90.

● 7:30: Confluence Concerts. Tricky Sankanara at 80. A celebratory concert, curated by Suba Sarkanara, featuring the master drummer and many of his students. Heliconian Hall, 35 Hazelton Ave. info@confluence-concerts.ca. Also Nov 23.

● 7:30: Music Gallery. Sense of Place: An Evening of Music by Pouya Hamidi. Pouya Hamid: The Battle Within, for solo piano; Aacho, for piano trio; Man Marq Ra, for voice and piano; Spherical Interactions, for accordion, voice, violin, viola, cello, percussion, and piano; Three Reflections on Empathy, for accordion, violin, viola, and cello. Geofrey Conquer; piano; Zarania Sadiq, voice; Michael Bridge, accordion; Ayshil Taghi-Zadeh, violin; Alina Homzy, violin. 918 Bathurst Centre for Culture, Arts, Media and Education, 918 Bathurst St. 416-204-1080. $10-$15.

● 7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. U of T Opera presents A Comedic Trilogy: Hin und zurück (Hindemith), Monsieur Choufleuri (Offenbach), Gallantry (Moore). MacMillan Theatre, Edward Johnson Building, 80 Queen’s Park. 416-408-0208. $40; $25(sr); $10(st). U of T students admitted free with a valid TCard, space permitting. Also on Nov 24, 26, 27(3:00pm).

● 8:00: Flato Markham Theatre. A Very Motown Christmas. 171 Town Centre Blvd., Markham. www.flatomarkhamtheatre.ca or 905-305-7469 or boxoffice@markham.ca. $15-$30.

● 8:00: Folk Under The Clock. Lennie Gallant: The Innkeeper’s Christmas Concert. Market Hall Performing Arts Centre, 140 Charlotte St., Peterborough. 705-749-1146 or www.folkundertheclock.ca. $49.

● 8:00: Hughie’s Room. Maggie’s Wake.

Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto No.1, Symphony No.6 ("Pathétique"). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 24, 25(7:30pm), 26.
}

Friday November 25

● 7:30: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Tchaikovsky’s Piano Concerto and Pathétique. Tarrodi: Birds of Paradise II; Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto No.1, Symphony No.6 ("Pathétique"). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor; Roy Thomson Hall. 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 23, 25(7:30pm), 26.

Saturday November 26

● 7:00: Toronto Gilbert & Sullivan Society. Holiday Celebration. Sing-alongs, Christmas Carol, amusing entertainments, and an array of splendid treats. St. Andrew’s United Church (Bloor St.), 117 Bloor St E. Free (members); $55 (non-members). All welcome.

● 7:30: Symphony Orchestra. Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto and Pathétique. Tarrodi: Birds of Paradise II; Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto No.1, Symphony No.6 ("Pathétique"). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor; Roy Thomson Hall. 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 23(8:30pm), 24, 26, 28(6:30pm).

● 7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. U of T Opera presents A Comedic Trilogy: Hin und zurück (Hindemith), Monsieur Choufleuri (Offenbach), Gallantry (Moore). MacMillan Theatre, Edward Johnson Building, 80 Queen’s Park. 416-408-0208. $40; $25(sr); $10(st). U of T students admitted free with a valid TCard, space permitting. Also on Nov 24, 26, 27(3:00pm).

● 8:00: Greater Toronto Philharmonic Orchestra. Autumn Classics. Borodin: In the Steppes of Central Asia; Mozart: Piano Concerto No.23 in A K488 (Mvmt 1); Lalo: Symphonie espagnole; Ravel: Piano Concerto in G; Grieg: Lyric Suite; Liszt: Les Préludes. Amber Chow, piano; Max Tian, piano; L.Salma Khanikov, piano; Oliver Balaburski, conductor.

Cavin Presbyterian Church, 26 Belvale Ave. www.tickets@gtpo.ca or 447-238-0015. $25-$30.

● 8:00: Massey Hall. The Smile. 178 Victoria St. 416-872-4255. TBA.

● 8:00: Masterworks of Oakville Chorus & Orchestra. The Seasons by Joseph Haydn. Ariel Harwood-Jones, soprano; Chris Fischer, tenor; Kevin McMillan, baritone; Masterworks of Oakville Chorus & Orchestra. St. Matthew Catholic Church, 1150 Monks Passage, Oakville. 905-399-9732. $40; $35(sr); Free(30 and under). Also Nov 27(3:00pm).

● 8:00: Ovation Women’s Choir. Winter Garden. An evening of new Canadian music for upper voices. Don MacDonald: Fire-Flowers; Newly commissioned works by Matthew Emery; Benjamin Keast, and Marie-Claire Saindon, Oriana Women’s Choir; Mitchell Pady, artistic director. Church of St. Mary Magdalene (Toronto), 417 Manning Ave. 416-346-7919. $25; $20(under 35 sr); $10(st).

● 8:00: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Tchaikovsky’s Piano Concerto and Pathétique. Tarrodi: Birds of Paradise II; Tchaikovsky: Piano Concerto No.1, Symphony No.6 ("Pathétique"). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor; Roy Thomson Hall. 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 24, 25, 26.
LIVE OR ONLINE | Nov 1 to Dec 13, 2022

(“Pathétique”). Sergei Babayan, piano; Dalia Stasevska, conductor: Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $35. Also Nov 23, 24, 25(27/30pm).

Sunday November 27

- 2:30: Kitchener-Waterloo Symphony. Scheherazade. Price: Andante moderato from String Quartet in G; Rachmaninov: Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini; Rimsky-Korsakov: Scheherazade. Joseph Moog, piano; Emilia Hoving, conductor: Centre in the Square, 101 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-745-4717 or 1-888-745-4717. $29-$87. Also Nov 28 (pm).

- 2:30: Niagara Symphony Orchestra. Brahms’ Second. Weber: Overture to Der Freischütz; Miller: Shaker Dance; Night; Brahms: Symphony No.2. Sara Davis Buechner, piano; Bradley Thachuk, conductor: Partridge Hall, FirstOntario Performing Arts Centre, 250 St. Paul St., St. Catharines. 905-687-4933. $60; $50(sr); $35(arts worker with valid ID); $15(student/university or college with valid ID); $15(youth-18 and under with valid ID).

- 2:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. I of T Opera presents A Comedic Trilogy: Hinn und zurück (Hindemith), Monsieur Choufleuri (Offenbach), Gallantry (Moore). MacMillan Theatre, Edward Johnson Building, 80 Queen’s Park. 416-408-0208. $40; $25(sr); $10(st). U of T students admitted free with valid TCard, space permitting. Also on Nov 24, 25, 26 at 7:30pm.

- 3:00: Masterworks of Oakville Chorus & Orchestra. The Seasons by Joseph Haydn. Ariel Harwood-Jones, soprano; Chris Fischer, tenor; Kevin McMillan, baritone; Masterworks of Oakville Chorus & Orchestra. St. Matthew Cathedral, 1150 Monks Passage, Oakville. 905-399-9732. $40; $35(sr); Free (30 and under). Also Nov 26 (pm).

- 3:15: Mooredale Concerts. Vivaldi Rare Works. Ensemble Caprice. Walter Hall, Edward Johnson Building, University of Toronto, 80 Queen’s Park, 416-922-3744 X130 or 647-988-2102 (eve & weekends) or www.mooredaleconcerts.com. $45; $40(sr); $30(under 30).

- 3:30: Front Porch Music. A Parade of Light. Monique de Margerie, piano; Fraser Jackson, bassoon; Domenc Desautels, clarinet; Julie Ranti, flute; Alex Laidtke, oboe; Christopher Gongs, horn. 918 Bathurst Centre for Culture, Arts, Media and Education, 918 Bathurst St. www.frontporchmusic.com.

- 4:00: Guelph Chamber Choir. A Christmas Story. Guelph Guild of Storytellers; Guelph Chamber Choir; Charlene Pauls, conductor: Harcourt United Church, 87 Dean Ave., Guelph. 519-993-6414, $30; $21(Early Bird); $25(10); $10(ages 16-30); $5(under 15). $20(Livestream). LIVE & LIVESTREAM.

- 4:00: Ensemble Caprice. Vivaldi rare works 3:15pm Nov 27

Sun Nov 27

VIOLINISSIMO

José Evangelista
Andrew Staniland
John Rea
Alexina Louie

The Esprit Orchestra: Astounding!

espiritorchestra.com

- 8:00: Esprit Orchestra. Violinissimo. José Evangelista: Violinissimo, concerto for violin and orchestra; Andrew Staniland: Six Enigmas, concerto for violin and orchestra (world premiere); John Rea: Figures hâtives, concerto for violin and orchestra; Alexina Louie: Triple Concerto for three violins and orchestra. Aaron Schwobel, Marie Béard, Stephen Staraks, violin; Alex Paul, conductor: Koerner Hall, TELUS Centre, 273 Bloor St. W. 416-408-0208 or www.espiritorchestra.com or info@espiritorchestra.com. $27-$65. 7:30pm: pre-concert chat with Alexina Louie.

- 8:00: Hugh’s Room. Quartette. Paradise Theatre, 1006 Bloor St. W. www.hugh’sroomlive.com.

Monday November 28

- 12:10: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. Japanese Taiko Drumming Ensemble Lobby Concert. Edward Johnson Building, University of Toronto, Main Lobby, 80 Queen’s Park, 416-978-3750 or www.music.utoronto.ca. Free.

- 12:10: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Mazzoli’s Quartet. John Rea, John Scott, Barbara Hannigan, Ben Heppner. 745-4711 or 1-888-745-4717. $29-$87. Also Nov 27.

- 8:00: Music Toronto. Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts, 145 Queen St. W. Free.

Wednesday November 30

- 12:00 noon: Canadian Opera Company. Vocal Series: Wirth Vocal Prize. Works by Berlioz, Duparc, Dvořák, Strauss, and Barbara Assinagak. Elisabeth Saint-Geli, soprano; Louise Pelletier, piano. Richard Bradshaw Amphitheatre, Four Seasons Centre for the Performing Arts, 145 Queen St. W. Free.

- 12:15: St. Andrew’s Presbyterian Church (Kitchener). Douglas Haas Legacy Concerts. Katrinia Lisa Keeler, oboe; Tina Giannopoulos, violin. 54 Queen St. N., Kitchener. 519-578-4430. LIVE & LIVESTREAM.

- 12:30: ORGANIX Concerts. Cadence Brassard, Organ. All Saints Kingsway Anglican Church, 2850 Bloor St. W. 416-571-3880 or organixconcerts.ca. Freewill offering ($20 suggested).

- 2:30: Kingston Symphony Orchestra. Family Concerts: Harmony Live! Justin T. Lee & Lindsay Lee, Gazzelle Automations; Evan Mitchell, conductor: Grand Theatre (Kingston), 218 Princess St., Kingston. 615-530-2050 or www.kingstongrand.ca/events/harmony-live-family-1. $20(adults/1); $15(st); $10(12 and under).

Thursday December 1

- 8:00: Hugh’s Room. Black Umfolosi. 3030 Dundas West, 3030 Dundas St. W. www.hugh’sroomlive.com.

- 8:00: Music Toronto. St. Lawrence String Quartet with Odin Quartet. Mozart: Quartet in E-flat K284; Haydn: Quartet in G Op.76 No.2 “Die Quinten”; Golijov: “Ever Yours,” octet

Christmas Lights. Stories, poems and music.

Friday December 2

7:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. University of Toronto Faculty of Music Wind Ensemble, Dana Wilson: Sang; Lars Erik Larson: Concerto for Saxophone; Maria Eduarda Mendes: Dark: 80; Instar; Stravinsky: Octet for Winds; Bernstein (arr. Lavender): Symphonic Dances from West Side Story. MacMillan Theatre, Edward Johnson Building, 80 Queen’s Park. 416-408-0208. $30; $20(st); $10(st). U of T students admitted free with a valid TCard, space permitting.

7:30: Rose Theatre. The Rose Orchestra: Celebrate Light. Diwali, Hannahuk, Kwanza, Christmas, this truly is a season of light for everyone! Celebrate with the Rose Orchestra and choral guests as they share the glory of the holiday season with you, their extended family, and friends. 1 Theatre Ln., Brampton. 905-874-2600 or www.theroesteatre.com. 8:15-8:34.

7:30: Roy Thomson Hall. Christmas With the Salvation Army. 60 Simcoe St. 416-872-4255. From $29.

7:30: Celebrate 45 years of the TCC! torontochildrenschorus.com

Saturday December 3

2:00: Toronto Children’s Choir. Sing Loo! Venue TBA. 416-952-6666 or www.tochildrenschorus.com/performances.

3:00: Yorkminster Park Baptist Church. Carol Sing. Lorena McKennitt, harp; Toronto Mass Choir; Houghton Brass; Barrie Children’s Chorus; Hedgerow Singers; Dina Pugliese, host. 1855 Yonge St. www.yorkminsterpark.com or #9sparrows.org. Fee. A collection will be taken for the Churches-on-the-Hill Food Bank.

3:00: Music at St. Andrew’s. Singing the Season. Sing-a-long to swing, pop, jazz and steel pan music. Jordan Klapman Sextet; Pan-masters Steel Orchestra; and special guests. St. Andrew’s Presbyterian Church (Toronto), 75 Simcoe St. 416-405-8400 X201. PWYC.

7:30: Rose Theatre. The Rose Orchestra: Celebrate Light. Diwali, Hannahuk, Kwanza, Christmas, this truly is a season of light for everyone! Celebrate with the Rose Orchestra and choral guests as they share the glory of the holiday season with you, their extended family, and friends. 1 Theatre Ln., Brampton. 905-874-2600 or www.theroesteatre.com. 8:15-8:34.

7:30: Roy Thomson Hall. Christmas With the Salvation Army. 60 Simcoe St. 416-872-4255. From $29.

Sunday December 4

2:30: University of Toronto Faculty of Music. All Choirs: Soprano-Alto Chorus, Tenor-Bass Choir, Chamber Choir, and Mac-Millan Singers. Adolphus Hailstork: Ye Shall Have a Song; Laura Hawley; in dulci jubilo; Matthew Larkin: Adam lay ybounder; Elizabeth Macomber: There Is No Rose; Sarah Quartet: Winter Solstice; R. Murray Schafer: Gamelan; Schumann: Der Nussbaum. St. Anne’s Anglican Church, 276 Gladstone Ave. 416-408-0208. $30; $20(st); $10(st). U of T students admitted free with a valid TCard, space permitting.

3:00: Kitchener-Waterloo Symphony Youth Orchestra. Concert 1. Featuring Preludium Strings, Youth Strings and Youth Singin. First Union Church (Waterloo), 16 William St. W. Waterlo, 519-745-4711 or 1-888-745-4717. $35; $25(st); $15(under 30).

Handel’s MESSIAH
Sunday, December 4, 2022
3:30 pm
Basilica of Our Lady Immaculate, 28 Norfolk Street Guelph ON

Monday December 5

7:30: Confluence Concerts. The Wal- ter Unser Salon: A Confluence Christmas. Atrom, 21 Shaftesbury Ave. info@confluenceconcerts.ca.

Tuesday December 6

Wednesday December 7

12:30: ORGANIX Concerts. Peter Beyer, Organ. Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, 305 Bloor St. W. 416-571-3868 or organixconcerts.ca. Freewill offering ($20 suggested).

7:30: Toronto Mendelssohn Choir. Festival of Carols. Shireen Abu-Khader: Carol of Toronto (TMC commission); and Traditional Christmas Carols and works by Felix Mendelssohn, Jonathan Dove, Morten Lauridsen and others. Toronto Mendelssohn Choir; Toronto Mendelssohn Singers; Isabelle Demers, organist; Jean-Sébastien Vallée, conductor. Yorkminster Park Baptist Church, 1585 Yonge St. www.tmcroir.org/event/festi- val-of-carols-2022 or 416-408-0208. $39.95- $89; $39.95-$80.50(sr); $24.95(VOTIX). Also Dec 7.

8:00: Royal Conservatory of Music. 21C Music Festival & Music on Film Series: Kronos Quartet on Film: A Thousand Thoughts. A live documentary with the Kronos Quartet, written and directed by Sam Green and Joe Bini. Koerner Hall, TELUS Centre, 273 Bloor St. W. 416-408-0208 or rcmusic.com/perform- ance. $21-$45.

8:30: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. TSO Holiday Pops. Caisse Levy, Paul Alexan- der Nolan, vocalists; Etoile School of the Arts Choir, Steven Reineke, conductor. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $62. Also Dec 6, 7(2 & 8pm).

Thursday December 8

7:45: New Music Concerts. Digital Broadcast. James O’Dell takes As in a Simile. ONLINE... New Music Concerts’s YouTube page. Free. 7:45pm: pre-concert talk, 8pm: broadcast.

8:00: Massey Hall. Tim Baker and All Hands. 178 Victoria St. 416-872-4255. From $32.

8:00: Royal Conservatory of Music. 21C Music Festival Series: Kronos Quartet with students from The Glenn Gould School: Fifty Forward. Mazzoleni Concert Hall, Royal Con- servatory, 273 Bloor St. W. 416-408-0208 or rcmusic.com/performance. $21.

8:00: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. TSO Holiday Pops. Caisse Levy, Paul Alexan- der Nolan, vocalists; Etoile School of the Arts Choir, Steven Reineke, conductor. Roy Thomson Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $62. Also Dec 6, 7(2 & 8pm).

Friday December 9

7:00: Church of the Holy Trinity. The Christmas Story. A film screening. 19 Trinity Sq. www.thechristmastory.ca or 416-598-4527 X101. Suggested donation: $10; $5(child). Film screening also on Dec 16.

7:30: Toronto Symphony Orchestra. ELF in Concert. John Deebney, conductor. Roy Thom- son Hall, 60 Simcoe St. 416-598-3375. From $55. Also Dec 10(2pm & 7:30pm).

8:00: Art of Time Ensemble. To All A Good- night (4 Different Kind of Christmas Show). Art of Time Ensemble with featured singers Jackie Richardson, Jessica Mitchell, Liam Russell, and others. Harbourfront Centre Theatre 255 Queens Quay W. www.harbourfrontcentre.com/tickets. $39-$75. Also Dec 10.

8:00: Rose Theatre. Choir! Choir! Choir! Epic 80s Singalong! Nobu Adlinman and Daveed Goldman, creative directors. 1 Theatre Ln., Brampton. 905-874-2800 or www.therosetheatre.ca. $15-$29.

8:00: Sinfonia Toronto. Beethoven & Haydn. Haydn: String Quartet in E-flat Op.33 No.2. “The Joke.” Verdi: Ave Maria; Beethoven: No, non turbati; Zemlinsky: Maib- lumen blühten überall; Balfour: Pyotr’s Dream; and other works. Lynn Isnar, sop- rano; Nurhan Arman, conductor. Jane Mallet Theatre, St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts, 27 Front St. E. 416-495-0403 or info@sinfoniatoronto.com. TBA.

9:00: Toronto Consort. Praetorius Christmas Vespers. Toronto Consort with spe- cial guests, Trinity-St. Paul’s Centre, Jeanne Lamon Hall, 427 Bloor St. W. www.toronto- consort.org or 416-964-6337. From $36. Also Dec 10(2pm & 8pm). Also available on Early-Music.TV on demand.

11:00am: Xenia Concerts/TODAY Live.

11:00am: Xenia Concerts/TODAY Live.

Christmas Through the Ages
Music & stories to evoke the wonder and joy of Christmas Saturday, Dec 10, 2022 / 4:00 pm Tickets at www.paxchristichorale.org
Konixed Spirits Orchestra

Kristian Alexander | Music Director

LOCOMOTIVES, PUPPETS AND BUTTERFLIES

Saturday, December 10, 2022, 8 pm

Flato Markham Theatre

HONEYEGER, Pacific 231

CHEN and HE, Violin Concerto

STRATOSFARO, Petrushka (1911)

Kindred Spirits Orchestra

1. Christmas Memory: With Macaroni Angels
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: Christmas Memory: With Macaroni Angels

2. Christmas Caravan with Sultans of String
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:30
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: Christmas Caravan with Sultans of String

3. A Winter Day
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: Knox United Church, 235 Queens Quay W.
   - Time: 8:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: A Winter Day

4. Christmas Stories
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: Christmas Stories

5. The Sounds of Magic
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:30
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: The Sounds of Magic

6. Music of Hope
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 8:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: Music of Hope

7. We Joyfully
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 8:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: We Joyfully

8. The Magpies
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:00
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: The Magpies

9. Christmas Caravan with Sultans of String
   - Date: December 10, 2022
   - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
   - Time: 7:30
   - Conductor: Charles Taylor
   - Details: Christmas Caravan with Sultans of String

10. Christmas Stories
    - Date: December 10, 2022
    - Venue: St. James United Church, 15 Lambeth Rd.
    - Time: 7:00
    - Conductor: Charles Taylor
    - Details: Christmas Stories
LIVE OR ONLINE | Nov 1 to Dec 13, 2022

8:00: Burlington Performing Arts Centre. Merry Motown: Christmas Special with the Legends of Motown. 440 Locust St., Burlington. www.burlingtonperformingartscentre.merrymotown-christmas-special or 416-929-2525. $55(Premium); $39(Regular).

8:00: Massey Hall. Glass Tiger With Guests The Parachute Club. 178 Victoria St. 416-727-4255. From $51.

8:00: Richmond Hill Philharmonic Orchestra. A Magical Holiday. Alan Silverstien & Glen Ballard: The Polar Express; Mark Hayes: A Christmas Portrait; Bob Krogstad: The Bells of Christmas; Douglas Meyer: ‘Twas the Night before Christmas; Sarah Wallin Huff: Christmas Wayfarer; and other works. Jessica V. Kun, conductor. Richmond Hill Centre for the Performing Arts, 10268 Yonge St., Richmond Hill. www.rhpco.ca or 905-787-8871 or boxoffice@rhcentre.ca. $10-$34.

8:00: Rose Theatre. Brampton Concert Band: Christmas at The Rose. 1 Theatre Ln., Brampton. 905-674-2800 or www.therosetheatre.ca. $15-$29.

8:00: Toronto Consort. Praetorians: Christmas Vespers. Toronto Consort with special guests. Trinity-St. Paul’s Centre, Jeanne Lamon Hall, 427 Bloor St. W. www.toronto-consort.org or 416-864-6337. From $36. Also Dec 8(9pm), 10(2pm). Also available on Early-Music.TV on demand.

Sunday December 11

2:30: Niagara Symphony Orchestra. Christmas Caravan with Sultans of String. Sultans of String; Laura Second Secondary School Chamber Choir; Bradley Thachuk, conductor. Partridge Hall, FirstOntario Performing Arts Centre, 250 St. Paul St., St. Catharines. 905-687-4993. $68; $60(sr); $39(arts worker with valid ID); $15(students/university or college with valid ID); $15(youth-18 and under with valid ID). Also Dec 10(7:30pm).

Monday December 12

- 8:00: Roy Thomson Hall. Itzhak Perlman and Friends. Itzhak Perlman, violin; Emanuel Ax, piano; Jean-Yves Thibaudet, piano; Julian Lloyd String Quartet. 60 Simcoe St. 416-872-4255. From $75.

Tuesday December 13

Nov 1 to Dec 13, 2022

LIVE OR ONLINE

MAINLY CLUBS

Live music is an ever-changing scene! Please consult venue websites and social media to confirm their artist roster and schedules, seating / booking policies, any other pertinent information to make your visit fun, safe, and enjoyable.

3030 Dundas West
3030 Dundas St. W. 416-769-5736
3030dundaswest.com
A large, airy space that plays hosts to concerts, events, and more. 3030 Dundas is home to a wide variety of music and a top-notch Trinidadian-Canadian food menu.

Burdock
1164 Bloor St. W. 416-546-4033
burdockto.com
A sleek music hall with exceptional sound and ambience, featuring a draft list of house-made brews.

Cameron House
408 Queen St. W. 416-703-0811
thecameron.com
An intimate, bohemian bar with ceiling murals & nightly performances from local roots acts on 2 stages.

Capone’s Cocktail Lounge
1573 Bloor St. W. 416-534-7911
caponestoronto.com
A self-described perfect marriage of an intimate cocktail den and comfortable neighbourhood bar, with live music Wednesday through Sunday.

Castro’s Lounge
2116 Queen St. E. 416-699-8272
castrolounge.com
Featuring an ever-changing selection of specialty beers, Castro’s hosts a variety of local live music acts, including bluegrass, jazz, rockabilly, and alt-country.

C’est What
67 Front St. E. 416-867-8499
cestwhat.com
A haven for those who appreciate real cask ale, draught beer from local Ontario breweries, and live music.

Drom Taberna
458 Queen St. W. 647-748-2099
dromtaberna.com
A heartfelt homage to the lands that stretch from the Baltic to the Balkans to the Black Sea, with a wide variety of music.

Emmet Ray, The
924 College St. 416-792-4497
emmetray.com
A whisky bar with a great food menu, an ever-changing draft list, and live jazz, funk, folk, and more in the back room.

Grossman’s Tavern
379 Spadina Ave. 416-977-1000
grossmanstavern.com
One of the city’s longest-running live music venues, and Toronto’s self-described “Home of the Blues.”

Hirut Cafe and Restaurant
2050 Danforth Ave. 416-551-7560
hirut.ca
A major destination for delicious and nutritious Ethiopian cuisine, with monthly jazz residencies and jam sessions.

Home Smith Bar – See Old Mill, The Hugh’s Room
296 Broadview Ave. 416-533-5483
hughsrroom.com
A dedicated listening room with an intimate performing space, great acoustics, and an attentive audience.

Jazz Bistro, The
251 Victoria St. 416-363-5299
jazzbistro.ca
In an historic location, Jazz Bistro features great food, a stellar wine list, and world-class jazz musicians in a city club environs.

Jazz Room, The
Located in the Huthier Hotel, 59 King St. N., Waterloo. 226-478-1565 kwjazzroom.com
A welcoming music venue dedicated to the best in jazz music presentations, and home to the Grand River Jazz Society, which presents regular series throughout the year.

Lula Lounge
1585 Dundas St. W. 416-588-0307
lula.ca
Toronto’s mecca for salsa, jazz, afro-Cuban, and world music, with Latin dance classes and excellent food and drinks.

Manhattans Pizza Bistro & Music Club
951 Gordon St., Guelph 519-767-2440
manhattans.ca
An independently owned neighbourhood restaurant boasting a unique dining experience that features live music almost every night of the week.

Mezzetta Restaurant
681 St. Clair Ave. W. 416-658-5687
mezzetarestaurant.com
With a cozy atmosphere and a menu of Middle Eastern cuisine, Mezzetta hosts music on Wednesday evenings.

Monarch Tavern
12 Clinton St. 416-531-5833
thenonarchtavern.com
With a café/cocktail bar on the main floor and a pub with microbrews upstairs, Monarch Tavern regularly hosts indie, rock, and other musical genres on its stage.

Nice Bistro, The
117 Brock St. W., Whitby 905-886-8839
nicebistro.com
A French restaurant with Mediterranean flair. Nice Bistro hosts ticketed live music events once every month or so.

Old Mill, The 21 Old Mill Rd. 416-236-2641
oldmilltoronto.com
The Home Smith Bar: With a stone-lined room and deep, plush seating, the Home Smith Bar provides elevated pub food and cocktails along with straight-ahead live jazz.

Pilot Tavern, The
22 Cumberland Ave. 416-923-5716
thepilot.ca
With over 75 years around Yonge and Bloor, the Pilot is a multi-level bar that hosts live music on Saturday afternoons.

Poetry Jazz Café
1078 Queen St West.
poetryjazzcafe.com
A sexy, clubby space, Poetry hosts live jazz, hip-hop, and DJs nightly in its new home on Queen Street West.

Reposado Bar & Lounge
136 Ossington Ave. 416-532-6474
reposadobar.com
A chic, low-light bar with top-shelf tequila, Mexican tapas, and live music.

Reservoir Lounge, The 52 Wellington St. E. 416-955-0887
reservoirlounge.com
Toronto’s self-professed original swing-jazz bar and restaurant, located in a historic speakeasy near St. Lawrence Market, with live music four nights a week.

Rex Hotel Jazz & Blues Bar, The 194 Queen St. W. 416-598-3475
therex.ca
With over 60 shows per month of Canadian and international groups, The Rex is Toronto’s longest-running jazz club, with full bar and kitchen menu.

Sauce on Danforth
1376 Danforth Ave. 647-748-1376
sauceondanforth.com
With Victorian lighting, cocktails, and an extensive tap and bottle list, Sauce on Danforth has live music Tuesday through Saturday (and sometimes Sunday).

The Senator Winebar
249 Victoria St 416-564-7517
thesenator.com
An intimate, upscale French-inspired bistro with live music serving hearty, delicious comfort food alongside a curated selection of wine and cocktails.

Smokeshow BBQ and Brew
744 Mt. Pleasant Rd 416-901-2469
Smokeshowbbqandbrew.com
Laid-back venue with an emphasis on barbecue and beer, Smokeshow hosts cover artists and original music Thursday through Sunday, with Bachata lessons on Tuesdays and Karaoke on Wednesdays.

Tranzac
292 Brunswick Ave. 416-923-8137 tranzac.org
A community arts venue dedicated to supporting, presenting, and promoting creative and cultural activity in Toronto, with live shows in multiple rooms every day of the week.

JOIN THE CLUBS!

IS YOUR VENUE?
- An informal listening room,
- Where food and/or drink may be part of the mix,
- With listening to music the primary focus?

“Mostly jazz” is not a rule!

If you’re not listed above, and think you belong please get in touch!
listings@thewholenote.com

thewhelonenote.com
Welcome to the second printing of our 23rd annual “Blue Pages” index of music presenters and arts service providers. The organizations listed below (with a bit of “teaser” info!) have opted in via their WholeNote membership. Full profiles can be found online at thewholenote.com - hover over our “Who’s Who” tab, then click on “2022-23 Presenter Profiles” to see the details of what’s coming up this season. Profiles will remain online for the year, and we’ll be adding more as they come in, so check back often.

For information on WholeNote membership and how to join the Blue Pages, email members@thewholenote.com

Wishing you all a happy musical season!

Aga Khan Museum
“Experience the magic of performance at the Aga Khan Museum as local and global artists connect cultures through the power of the arts.”
agakhanmuseum.org

Alliance Francaise Toronto
“Alliance Francaise Toronto is dedicated to the Greater Toronto Area Community and committed to promoting and presenting cultural events that highlight the diversity of Francophone Culture, such as concerts, exhibitions, lectures or cinema.”
alliance-francaise.ca/en

Amadeus Choir
“Toronto’s 90-member Amadeus Choir is delighted to present a 2022/23 season of live choral performances with new commissions, classic favourites, outdoor and indoor performances, and a stellar roster of guest artists.”
amadeuschoir.com

Amici Chamber Ensemble
“Amici Chamber Ensemble celebrates 33 years as one of Canada’s most distinguished chamber music ensembles. Artistic Directors clarinetist Joaquin Valdepeñas, cellist David Hetherton and pianist Serouj Kradjian invite some of the finest musicians to join them in innovative and eclectic programming, celebrating friendship through music.”
amiciensemble.com

Annex Singers of Toronto
“Now in its 43rd season, The Annex Singers is a spirited, auditioned, 85-voice choir with an eclectic repertoire spanning seven centuries.”
annexsingers.com

Art of Time Ensemble
“Exploring the relationship between classical music in its many forms and other genres such as jazz, pop, electronics, rock, folk, electroacoustic, gospel and others, Art of Time seeks to reveal the qualities that lie at the heart of all music.”
artoftimeensemble.com

Azrieli Music Prizes
“The Azrieli Music Prizes: Discovering, creating, performing and celebrating excellence in music composition.”
azrielfoundation.org/amp

Barrie Concert Band
“Over the years, the Barrie Concert Band has participated in various city events, presenting regular winter and summer concerts, and providing music at local churches and seniors’ homes. The band performs an average of 8 concerts per year and is available for special functions.”
barrieconcertband.org

Canadian Opera Company
“The Canadian Opera Company is the largest producer of opera in Canada.”
coc.ca

Canadian Sinfonietta
“The Canadian Sinfonietta (CS) performs both as a larger orchestra and in smaller ensembles, with a mission to attract new concert goers through a balance of traditional and new works. Programs often feature multi-cultural music, non-western instruments, and diverse Canadian artists.”
cadiansinfonietta.com

Cathedral Bluffs Symphony Orchestra
“Cathedral Bluffs Symphony Orchestra has been bringing to Greater Toronto audiences some of the greatest musical masterpieces, and new Canadian compositions, since 1986. Our 2022/23 season, under the baton of Maestro Martin MacDonald, promises six evenings of exceptional orchestral music.”
cathedralbluffs.com

Church of St. Mary Magdalene Gallery Choir
“Every Sunday an award winning choir of volunteers sings music from the early Renaissance to the most recent Canadian composers.”
stmarymagdalene.ca

Confluence Concerts
“An act or process of merging”: “Confluence produces joyous, daring and thought-provoking events within a warm atmosphere of intimacy and discovery. Artistic Associates Larry Beckwith, Marion Newman, Andrew Downing, Patricia O’Callaghan and Suba Sankaran curate a wide variety of collaborative programs.”
confluenceconcerts.ca

COSA Canada: The Centre for Opera Studies & Appreciation
“We excite the music in everyone - the story-singers on stage, and the story-catchers in the audience! Join in our house concerts, premieres, productions, artist spotlights and opera pops!”
www.cosacanada.org

Don Wright Faculty of Music at Western University
“In our 2022/23 season, we are proud to welcome you in person to experience the incredible diversity of musical styles and genres our students, faculty and guest artists have to offer.”
music.uwo.ca

Edison Singers
“The Edison Singers is a fully professional chamber choir. This upcoming season is literally our second new beginning. We can’t wait to see you at a performance this season.”
theedisonsingers.com

Elmer Iseler Singers
“Elmer Iseler Singers is a 20-voice Toronto-based professional chamber choir directed by Lydia Adams. Founded by the late Dr. Elmer Iseler in 1979, EIS is known for tonal beauty and interpretive range.”
elmeriseler singers.com

Ensemble Vivant
“Chamber music at its evocative best!”
ensemblevivant.com

Esprit Orchestra
“Founded in 1983 by Music Director and Conductor Alex Pauk, Esprit Orchestra’s commitment to commissioning and advancing contemporary music has set it apart as one of the few organizations of its kind on a global scale.”
espritorchestra.com

Etobicoke Centennial Choir
“After a joyous return to live performance in May 2022, Etobicoke Centennial Choir looks forward with great anticipation and hope to a full season of live choral music!”
etobicokecentennialchoir.ca

Etobicoke Community Concert Band
“Great music … right in your own backyard!”
ecch.ca

Esotique Phiharmonic Orchestra
“Priding itself on being an affordable, accessible and welcoming concert experience, the Esotique Phiharmonic Orchestra (EPO) has been celebrating symphonic music in Etobicoke for over 60 years.”
eporchestra.ca

Exultate Chamber Singers
“Founded in 1981, Exultate Chamber Singers is an award-winning adult mixed-voice chamber choir of richly varied ages and cultural backgrounds. Together they form a passionate, committed ensemble with a wide-ranging repertoire.”
exultate.net

Flute Street
“Flute Street is comprised entirely of flutes, from the tiny twelve inch piccolo through to the very rare twelve foot double contrabass flute.”
flutestreet.ca

Glionna Mansell Corporation
“Glionna Mansell presents excellence in organ installations and concert presentations. Whether MOSAIC Canadian Vocal Ensemble, Allen Organs or ORGANIX CONCERTS, the effort is always focused on producing excellence and unique musical experiences.”
glionnamansell.com
Greater Toronto Philharmonic Orchestra

“Now in its 15th season, the GTPO has become a unique organization built upon a collaborative artistic model, a trusted partner for other arts groups and a showcase opportunity for young talented musicians.”
gtiop.ca

Hannaford Street Silver Band

“The Hannaford Street Silver Band is Canada’s award-winning professional brass band and resident company of Toronto’s St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts.”
hsb.ca

Isabel Bader Centre for the Performing Arts

“The Isabel Bader Centre for the Performing Arts (The Isabel) is a home for the creative arts at Queen’s University in Kingston, Ontario and a hub of vibrant artistic study, creation, and exhibition in our community.”
queensu.ca/thisabel

Jubilate Singers

“The Jubilate Singers is a Toronto-based SATB community choir performing multicultural music under the direction of Isabel Bernnaus; an auditioned choir plus a Choral Development program.”
jubilatesingers.ca

Kindred Spirits Orchestra

“The Kindred Spirits Orchestra (KSO) is a critically acclaimed auditioned civic orchestra performing at the Flato Markham Theatre, the Richmond Hill Centre for the Performing Arts, and the CBC Glenn Gould Studio in Toronto.”
KSOOrchestra.ca

Keenor Hall at The Royal Conservatory of Music

“The Royal Conservatory’s Keenor Hall is “the greatest venue in this city” and “magnificent in its acoustics, as much as in its design” (Toronto Star).”
rcmusic.com/performance

Li Delun Music Foundation

“The Li Delun Music Foundation was established in 2002 in Toronto as a non-profit organization dedicated to promoting cultural exchange between the East and the West through innovative, cutting-edge music by Canadian and international composers.”
lidelun.org

Metropolitan United Church

“An affirming and welcoming church, Metropolitan United is a home to great sacred music in the heart of Toronto.”
metunited.org

Mississauga Chamber Singers

“The Mississauga Chamber Singers bring clarity and intimacy to great choral masterpieces.”
mcsingers.ca

Mississauga Festival Choir

“Under the leadership of David Ambrose, MFC performs many concerts, raises money for local charities, records professional CDs, holds an annual choral competition and tours the world.”
mfchoir.com

Mississauga Symphony Orchestra

“With a combination of 100 community musicians and professional section leads, the Mississauga Symphony Orchestra (MSO) has earned the reputation as the best hybrid orchestra in Canada.”
mississaugasympohony.ca

Moosalee Concerts

“Great music for all.”
moosaleeconcerts.com

Music at St. Andrew’s

“Music at St. Andrew’s presents great music at affordable prices!”
standrewstoronto.org

Music Gallery

“The Music Gallery has been Toronto’s Centre for Creative Music since 1976.”
musicgallery.org

Music in the Afternoon

(“Music in the Afternoon” concert series, the WMCT presents chamber music concerts featuring musicians on the threshold of international recognition, as well as established artists and ensembles.”
wmc.on.ca

Music Toronto

“We invite you to join us for our main series and for the Small Ensembles Celebration, chamber music concerts traditional and ground-breaking.”
music-toronto.com

Nathaniel Dett Chorale

“The Nathaniel Dett Chorale is Canada’s premier performer of Afrocentric composers and a touchstone for the education of audiences and communities regarding the spectrum of Afrocentric choral music.”
nathanieldettcchorale.org

New Music Concerts

“At New Music Concerts we inspire our listeners with extraordinary performances of the world’s most adventurous music. NMC is a leader in curating, performing, and promoting innovative, cutting-edge music by Canadian and international composers.”
newmusicconcerts.com

Nine Sparrows Arts Foundation

“...dedicated to bringing the best in inspirational arts programming.”
9sparrowsarts.org

Nocturnes in the City

“Czech community centre presents Nocturnes in the City’s 23rd season.”
nocturnesinthecey.ca

Off Centre Music Salon

“Art is how we decorate space, music is how we decorate time.”-Jean-Michel Basquiat. “Join us for our 28th season as we present unique, innovative “salon-style” concerts.”
offcentremusic.com

Orchestra Toronto

“Michael Newnham conducts five thrilling performances by musicians from your community making music for the love of it.”
orchestratoronto.ca

Oriana Women’s Choir

“Oriana explores the possibilities in choral music for upper voices. We foster the creation of Canadian choral music, regularly commissioning works from Canadian composers for upper voices.”
orianachoir.com

Orpheus Choir of Toronto

“The season features the poetry of Leonard Cohen; music honouring Canada’s indigenous peoples; narrators Gabriella Sundar Singh and Amaka Umeh; an exploration of music and mental health in Allan Bevan’s Perfectly Mad.”
orpheuscchoirtoronto.com

Pax Christi Chorale

“Pax Christi Chorale, under the artistic direction of Elaine Choi, champions great choral music and performs a wide range of repertoire. Join us for four concerts over the 2022-23 season.”
paxchristichorale.org

Performing Arts Brampton

“Performing Arts Brampton builds an inspiring community that reflects Brampton’s spirit and diversity. Comprised of four incredible venues - The Rose Brampton, LBP Brampton, Cyril Clark Brampton and Garden Square Brampton.”
theros Brampton.ca

Peterborough Singers

“A challenging choir in Peterborough for adults and youth.”
peterburoughsingiers.com

Rezonance Baroque Ensemble

“Inspired by history and informed by the present, Rezonance leads audiences through the discovery of under-appreciated and unusual works, and new ways of hearing the classics.”
rezonanceensemble.com

Royal Canadian College of Organists, Toronto

(info not available at time of publication)

SINE NOMINE Ensemble for Medieval Music

“SINE NOMINE offers vocal and instrumental music from medieval courts and churches to provide insight into the fascinating artistic and intellectual culture of the Middle Ages.”
pims.ca/article/sine-nomine

SoundCrowd

“SoundCrowd-Toronto’s first large-scale contemporary a cappella ensemble making harmony through harmony since 2016.”
soundcrowd.ca

Soundstreams

“Visit Soundstreams.ca for tickets and full program details for our exciting concert line up for our 40th Anniversary Season!”
soundstreams.ca

Southern Ontario Lyric Opera (SOLo)

“Southern Ontario Lyric Opera (SOLo) seeks to advance the public’s appreciation and enjoyment of the arts by providing high-quality performances of classical operatic works, for diverse audiences of all ages.”
southernontariolryicopera.com

St. Michael’s Choir School

“St. Michael’s Choir School is unique in offering both an enriched academic program, including extended French instruction, integrated with a lively ministry of sacred music.”
smcs.on.ca

The Nathaniel Dett Chorale

“The Nathaniel Dett Chorale is Canada’s premier performer of Afrocentric composers and a touchstone for the education of audiences and communities regarding the spectrum of Afrocentric choral music.”
nathanieldettcchorale.org

New Music Concerts

“At New Music Concerts we inspire our listeners with extraordinary performances of the world’s most adventurous music. NMC is a leader in curating, performing, and promoting innovative, cutting-edge music by Canadian and international composers.”
newmusicconcerts.com

Nine Sparrows Arts Foundation

“...dedicated to bringing the best in inspirational arts programming.”
9sparrowsarts.org

Nocturnes in the City

“Czech community centre presents Nocturnes in the City’s 23rd season.”
nocturnesinthecey.ca

Off Centre Music Salon

“Art is how we decorate space, music is how we decorate time.”-Jean-Michel Basquiat. “Join us for our 28th season as we present unique, innovative “salon-style” concerts.”
offcentremusic.com

Orchestra Toronto

“Michael Newnham conducts five thrilling performances by musicians from your community making music for the love of it.”
orchestratoronto.ca

Oriana Women’s Choir

“Oriana explores the possibilities in choral music for upper voices. We foster the creation of Canadian choral music, regularly commissioning works from Canadian composers for upper voices.”
orianachoir.com

Orpheus Choir of Toronto

“The season features the poetry of Leonard Cohen; music honouring Canada’s indigenous peoples; narrators Gabriella Sundar Singh and Amaka Umeh; an exploration of music and mental health in Allan Bevan’s Perfectly Mad.”
orpheuscchoirtoronto.com

Pax Christi Chorale

“Pax Christi Chorale, under the artistic direction of Elaine Choi, champions great choral music and performs a wide range of repertoire. Join us for four concerts over the 2022-23 season.”
paxchristichorale.org

Performing Arts Brampton

“Performing Arts Brampton builds an inspiring community that reflects Brampton’s spirit and diversity. Comprised of four incredible venues - The Rose Brampton, LBP Brampton, Cyril Clark Brampton and Garden Square Brampton.”
theros Brampton.ca

Peterborough Singers

“A challenging choir in Peterborough for adults and youth.”
peterburoughsingiers.com

Rezonance Baroque Ensemble

“Inspired by history and informed by the present, Rezonance leads audiences through the discovery of under-appreciated and unusual works, and new ways of hearing the classics.”
rezonanceensemble.com

Royal Canadian College of Organists, Toronto

(info not available at time of publication)
Welcome to Who's Who at thewholenote.com

Find details on all the Blue Pages member profiles here in the WholeNote Who’s Who.

Looking for a choir to join or support now that the summer season is past? Start your search here.

thewholenote.com/blue
And check back. They will be posted as we receive them, and they are coming in in a steady stream.

INTERESTED IN JOINING THE BLUE PAGES or any of our other Who’s Who directories?
All inquiries to karen@thewholenote.com

23rd Annual BLUE PAGES

St. Olave’s Anglican Church
“St. Olave’s celebrates the Anglican choral tradition Sunday mornings at 10:30am, and presents occasional Evensongs and other musical events.” stolaves.ca

Tafelmusik
“Tafelmusik is an orchestra, choir, and experience that celebrates beauty through music of the past. Founded on the pillars of passion, learning, and artistic excellence, Tafelmusik brings new energy to baroque music and beyond.” tafelmusik.org

That Choir
“Currently in its 15th season, That Choir is one of Toronto’s most exciting a cappella ensembles, combining high-calibre performance with storytelling through choral music.” thatchoir.com

Toronto Chamber Choir
“We live and breathe Early Music and love to share it with others.” torontochamberchoir.ca

Toronto Children’s Chorus
“Entering its 45th season, the Toronto Children’s Chorus is recognized worldwide as a leading choral organization for children and youth. We are committed to offering exceptional, inclusive choral music education.” torontochildrenschorus.com

Toronto Classical Singers
“With its exuberant approach, TCS celebrates the choral tradition with the complex sonority of a large choir with professional orchestra.” torontoclassicalsingers.ca

Toronto Consort
“Founded in 1972, The Toronto Consort is internationally celebrated for its excellence in the performance of Medieval, Renaissance, and Early Baroque music.” torontoconsort.org

Toronto Mendelssohn Choir
“The Toronto Mendelssohn Choir boldly returns with exciting new works, inspiring new faces, and a fresh new look!” tmchoir.org

Toronto Operetta Theatre
“TOT will return to the St. Lawrence Centre stage with a new season of musical entertainment from the wide world of Operetta and Music Theatre.” torontooperetta.com

Toronto Symphony Orchestra
“One of Canada’s most respected arts organizations, the Toronto Symphony Orchestra (TSO) plays a vital role in the city’s dynamic cultural life. The TSO is celebrating its 100th anniversary season in 2022/23.” tso.ca

Trio Arkel
“Trio Arkel, now in its 10th season, is composed of Marie Berard, violinist, Rémi Pelletier, violinist, and Winona Zelenka, cellist, who collaborate with guest artists to present fascinating programs of chamber music for their Toronto audience.” trioarkel.com

University of Toronto Faculty of Music
“The University of Toronto Faculty of Music is thrilled to present a wide range of performances, lectures, colloquia and more, as part of our annual season of events.” music.utoronto.ca

Upper Canada Choristers
“The Upper Canada Choristers is an SATB community choir in Toronto with a history of collaboration with choirs and professional guest artists. UCC is committed to excellence and diversity.” uppercanadachoristers.org

Vesnivka Choir
“Vesnivka Choir looks forward to returning to in-person performances with a 3-concert season featuring Ukrainian classical, contemporary, sacred and traditional folk music.” vesnivka.com

VIVA Singers Toronto
“VIVA Singers embrace the motto “Every Voice Matters.” vivayouthsingers.com

VOCA Chorus of Toronto
“A dynamic, auditioned ensemble under the leadership of artistic director Jenny Crober, VOCA performs a broad range of repertoire in collaboration with a variety of superb guest artists. Our seasons feature concerts, cabaret fundraisers, community performances and workshops.” vocachorus.ca

VOICEBOX: Opera in Concert
“Voicebox-OIC’s tradition continues in the coming season with astonishing works by the very young Mozart, Luigi Cherubini, and Joseph Bologne.” operainconcert.com

Westben Centre for Connection & Creativity Through Music
“Westben - Music in Nature” westben.ca

Wychwood Clarinet Choir
“Five varieties of clarinets playing in harmony. What could be more beautiful?” wychwoodclarinetchoir.ca

Xenia Concerts Inc.
“Xenia Concerts works with the neurodiversity and disability communities to produce and present exceptional performing arts experiences for children, families, and any others who face systemic barriers to inclusion.” xeniaconcerts.com

Yorkminster Park Baptist Church
“Yorkminster Park is synonymous with magnificent music. Whether it’s the choir accompanied by the majestic Casavant organ or the congregation lifting their voices in hymns of praise, vocal and instrumental expressions of faith are integral to the Yorkminster Park experience.” yorkminsterpark.com

ARTS SERVICES

Agence Station Bleue
“...one of the most important artists agencies in Canada, in classical, jazz and global music.” stationbleue.com/en

Linda Litwack Publicity
“Arts publicist Linda Litwack is a long-practiced matchmaker between artists and the media.” linkedin.com/in/linda-litwack-15371320

Rebecca Davis Public Relations
“...provides publicity, media and communications services to musicians, arts organisations and record labels, specialising in classical music and opera.” rebeccadavisispr.com
s a fairly accomplished amateur cellist and former classical radio programmer, I consider myself well-versed in the traditional cello repertoire. Imagine then my surprise to receive not one, but two, discs this month featuring works from 19th- and early 20th-century France of which I was previously unaware. Even three of the five composers were unfamiliar to me, although they were each celebrated in their lifetime.

Édouard Lalo | Paul Lacombe | Fernand de La Tombelle – Sonates pour piano et violoncelle (ATMA Classique ACDz 2873 atmaclas-sifique.com/en) features two highly regarded Quebecois performers, cellist Paul Marleyn and pianist Stéphane Lemelin. Of course I was familiar with the Cello Concerto in D Minor of Lalo (1825-1892) which has graced the standard repertoire since 1877, but his Sonata for Piano and Cello in A Minor from two decades earlier has languished in relative obscurity. Listening to the dynamic work, it is hard to understand why. It is a substantial offering with contrasting movements, lyrical and dramatic by turns, with memorable melodies and virtuosic flare. The same is true of the other works included here and it is surprising they, and their composers, are not better known. Although Lacombe was born only a dozen years after Lalo his Sonata for Piano and Cello Op.100 was written about 50 years after Lalo’s, in the early years of the 20th century. For all that, it shares a sensibility and language with Lalo, not reflecting the turbulent aesthetic changes happening around him, although there is Debussy-like melody in the opening movement un peu animé. This is followed by a lyrical Largo and concludes with an ebullient Allegro con fuoco. Baron de La Tombelle (1854-1928), numbered among his mentors Franz Liszt and Camille Saint-Saëns and he himself went on to count revered organist Marcel Dupré and composer/pedagogue Nadia Boulanger among his own pupils. Not only an accomplished musician and teacher, La Tombelle was also a distinguished poet, painter, sculptor and astronomer. His Cello Sonata in D Minor Sonata (1905) opens with an exuberant Allegro, followed by a gentle lullaby-like Lentement movement before its rousing Allegro vivace finale. Here, as throughout the disc, Marleyn and Lemelin’s playing is nuanced, articulate and totally convincing as it meets all the demands of this lovely music.

From the strident opening notes of the Sonata for Cello and Piano No.2 in A Minor (1919) by Guy Ropartz (1864-1955) the new Le Palais des Dégustateurs release Guy Ropartz | Albéric Magnard (PDD029 lepalaisdesdegustateurs.com) commands the listener’s attention. As with the previous disc, little known gems are presented in stunning performances by Alain Meunier and Anne le Bozec. To say the Ropartz opens stridently is not to suggest that the work is abrasive however, and the subsequent movements – Lent et calme and Très lent – Assez animé – are warm and lush. Ropartz and Magnard were neighbours and friends, both proud of their Breton heritage. Magnard (1865-1914) died defending his home from invading Germans in the early days of the First World War. In the attack his house was burned and several manuscripts destroyed but fortunately Ropartz was able to reconstitute from memory the orchestration of Magnard’s opera Guercoeur. The Sonata for Cello and Piano Op.20 in A Major from 1910 is in four movements, opening traditionally with a fast movement Sans lenteur – Alla zinghèse followed by a brief Scherzo lasting less than three minutes. The Funèbre third movement is followed by a boisterous finale bringing a wonderful disc to a rollicking close.

I was surprised to hear from the Dégustateurs label founder and renowned vintner Éric Rouyer, that he finds it hard to produce recordings of French music, presumably due to market pressures, although further on in these pages you will see another of his recordings featuring the piano music of contemporary Frenchman Guy Sacre, with soloist Billy Eidl. I commend Rouyer for his efforts to unearth neglected repertory pieces and, with such outstanding performers as here, he is to be congratulated and encouraged to continue his exploration of “the road less travelled.”

Full disclosure, my days at Thornlea Secondary School half a century ago briefly overlapped with those of composer David Eagle and more recently I was the general manager of New Music Concerts when he was invited to curate a concert in 2013 and commissioned to compose one of the works on the next recording. As mountain winds (Centrediscs CMCCD 30722 centrediscs.ca) features four compositions spanning 2011-2019 for ensembles of varying sizes. All include live computer processing and diffusion of the sounds of acoustic instruments, and, in the case of Unremembered Tongues the work mentioned above, soprano soloist (Xin Wang in the original Toronto performance). This 2021 recording features the powerful voice of Robyn Driedger-Klassen with the Turning Point Ensemble under the direction of founder Owen Underhill. It is in this complex work that we are most aware of the computer’s presence as the soloist’s voice is replicated, distorted, layered and distributed throughout space via an eight-speaker sound system (effective even in this stereo mix). Eagle tells us the initial inspiration came from thinking about the “many forgotten and endangered languages that are disappearing in our relentlessly modernizing society and monoculture. Sonic evocation of these lost modes of expression is a main focus of the work.” The languages he draws on are Iwaidja and Kayardild from northern Australia, Latin, Blackfoot, Basque, Cree and Hawaiian. The resulting “Tower of Babel” is very effective indeed. This is followed by Altered States and, such is the density of the computer manipulations, it takes careful listening to mean that in a respectful and musical way, quite fortifying in its journey his number one son. I find its relentless mechanical pounding, and I sichord, exuberantly performed by Toronto keyboardist Wesley Shen. I pattern such as

Textile Fantasies

I do understand what he was getting at. I thought of him fondly while machines, referring to the ostinatos of the continuo. While I don't agree, complain that Baroque music sounded to him like just so many sewing

Monica Pearce

Mack and, most recently, Canadian Monica Pearce contributing to the genre. Centrediscs has just released Textile Fantasies (CMCCD 30222 centrediscs.ca) comprising a cycle of chamber works for keyboards (harpischord, piano, toy pianos) and percussion (a plethora of mallet instruments, plus tabla with tambura drone) in various combinations. Each piece is inspired by the particular texture of a specific fabric or pattern such as silks, velvet and houndstooth. My late father used to complain that Baroque music sounded to him like just so many sewing machines, referring to the ostinatos of the continuo. While I don't agree, I do understand what he was getting at. I thought of him fondly while listening to the first of the Textile Fantasies, toile de Jouy for solo harpsichord, exuberantly performed by Toronto keyboardist Wesley Shen. I know Dad would have found it disturbing (as does my wife), but not so his number one son. I find its relentless mechanical pounding, and I mean that in a respectful and musical way, quite fortifying in its journey towards an eventual vanishing point. This is followed by leather for piano and percussion performed by Ottawa’s SHHH!! Ensemble in which the piano is mostly used as a percussive instrument though various extended techniques, dampening the strings and such. I find it wonderfully reminiscent of Bartók’s seminal work. There are two pieces for multiple percussionists featuring Toronto’s TorQ Percussion Quartet; two contrasting works for solo piano, one aggressive and percussive played by Barbara Pritchard and the other, contemplative, featuring Cheryl Duval; another, Damask, for tabla (Shawn Mativetsky) and piano (Shen) which hints at the Middle Eastern origins of that fabric; and the concluding denim for two percussionists and two toy pianos. Did I mention that Pearce was a co-founder of the Toy Piano Composers collective? She has also penned works for Bicycle Opera (who toured extensively by pedal power across Ontario) and New Fangled Opera; pieces for new music specialists Thin Edge New Music Collective, junctQín, Array, New Music Detroit and the International Contemporary Ensemble among many others; but also for such mainstream organizations as the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and l’Orchestre symphonique de Montréal. This disc provides an intriguing introduction to her smaller works and if you’re not familiar with Pearce it would be a great place to start. Concert note: There will be performances and a reception to launch Textile Fantasies at the Canadian Music Centre, 20 St. Joseph St., Toronto on November 10 at 4pm.

Getting back to Béla Bartók (1881-1945) for my final selection, a new recording by the Deutsche Radio Philharmonie under Pietari Inkinen (SWR Classic SWR19110CD naxos.com/CatalogueDetail/?id=SWR19110CD) features two fairly large works, Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta (1936) and the Divertimento for Strings (1939). The final two of Bartók’s six string quartets, a cycle renowned for its craggy complexity, were composed around this same time – 1934 and 1939 respectively – but in spite of their proximity, these larger works are much more listener friendly than the quartets. This is not to say that they don’t have their moments of angularity and darkness, but unlike the quartets in which the four instruments often seem to go their own way, here there is more of a sense of unity and homogeneity. In these new recordings, made in Saarbrücken in 2020 and 2021, the orchestra captures all the nuances of the two works’ contrasting moods, especially in the spooky passages featuring the celesta. But more interesting to me in the context of this article are three transcriptions of Bartók solo piano pieces for percussion ensemble performed by members of the orchestra. These effective new adaptions were done by Bernhard Wulff, professor of percussion at the Hochschule für Musik in Freiburg and long-time associate of Toronto’s legendary flute soloist and pedagogue Robert Aitken. Wulff is the founder and artistic director of a number of international music festivals, including Two Days and Two Nights of New Music in Odessa (Ukraine), Roaring Hooves in Mongolia, Silk Sound Road in Kyrgyzstan, Caspian Fires in Azerbaijan and Cracking Bamboo in Vietnam, many of which included Aitken in the roster of performers. The works here make a striking bridge between large ensemble pieces, beginning with the dynamic second of Six Dances in Bulgarian Rhythm from the final volume of Mikrokosmos, published the same year as the Divertimento. This is followed by the calm and quiet, almost pastoral, The Night’s Music from Out of Doors (1926), incidentally the year the first volume of Mikrokosmos was published. I was amused to hear a toy piano among the instruments. The percussion suite ends with a rambunctious rendition of the bombastic Allegro Barbaro, the first work to bring Bartók to international attention back in 1911. All in all the entire disc is a treat for the ears! ☺
The Montreal-based cellist Elinor Frey is back with a second volume of premiere recordings of works by the cellist-composer Giuseppe Clemente Dall’Abaco (1710-1805) on The Cello According to Dall’Abaco, accompanied by Catherine Jones (cello), Federica Bianchi (harp/pichord) and Michele Pasotti (theorbo) (Passacaille PAS 1122 elinorfrey.com).

Frey’s critical edition of the 35 accompanied cello sonatas of Dall’Abaco is published by Walhall Editions; five sonatas were featured on the first CD (PAS 1069) and a further three – in G Major ABV28, E-flat Major ABV37 and D Minor ABV45 – are heard here, together with all three of Dall’Abaco’s cello duets: the Duetto in G Major ABV47, the Duo in F Major ABV48 and the Duo in A Minor ABV49. No composition dates are known, but the music is probably from the 1730-1750 period.

The second cello adds depth to the continuo in the sonatas, while in the quite lovely duos the roles of melody and accompaniment are continually exchanged between the two performers.

Violinist Christian Tetzlaff cites “reasons of substance” to justifying pairing the Brahms & Berg Violin Concertos on his latest CD, with the Deutsches Symphonie-Orchester Berlin under Robin Ticciati, both works searching the depths of the soul and having a lot to say about pain (Ondine ODE-1410-2 ondine.net).

Tetzlaff has been playing both concertos for 40 years for a combined total of over 300 performances, and it shows. The Brahms is immensely satisfying, but the real joy here is the Berg, long recognized not only as a requiem for the 18-year-old Manon Gropius but also for Berg himself, the composer dying just four months after finishing the work. Moreover, the concerto is a deeply personal autobiography, full of intimate details of Berg’s life – tellingly, Tetzlaff’s detailed booklet essay is almost entirely about the Berg and its inner references. This is a performance by someone who knows this work inside out, and who finds the Bach chorale ending “incredibly beautiful whenever I play it.” And so it is.

Secret Love Letters, the latest CD from violinist Lisa Batashvili celebrates the concealment of the message of love in music, noting that so much of the message is secret and intimate (Deutsche Grammophon 000289.4860.4623 lisabatashvili.com/).

Pianist Giorgi Gigashvili joins the violinist in an electrifying performance of the Franck Sonata in A Major. Batashvili’s shimmering tone and strength in the highest register are fully evident in Szymanowski’s Sonata in A Major E-flat Major ABV37 and G Major ABV28, Dall’Abaco is published by Walhall Editions; five sonatas were featured continually exchanged between the two performers.

It’s hard to imagine more appropriate performers for a Dvořák string quartet recital than a top Czech ensemble, feelings more than borne out by listening to the Talich Quartet, originally formed in 1964 on their latest CD Dvořák American Quartet & Waltzes, their first recording with their new lineup (La Dolce Vita LDV101 ladolcevolta.com/?lang=en).

The Eight Waltzes for Piano Op. 54 B120 date from 1879-80; two were transcribed for string quartet by the composer himself, with the remaining six being transcribed for the Talich Quartet in 2020 by violist Jiří Kabát. They are an absolute delight.

The Quartet Movement in F Major B120 from October 1880 was intended as the first movement of a new quartet but abandoned; not premiered until 1945, it was published in 1951. A beautifully warm performance of the String Quartet in F Major Op.96 B179 “American” that simply bursts with life and spontaneity closes an outstanding CD.

Le Chant d’amour triumphant.

Nézet-Séguin is the pianist for the Heifetz arrangement of Debussy’s Beau soir which ends a CD that adds to Batashvili’s already impressive discography.
The wonderful Steven Isserlis is back with another engrossing CD, this time celebrating a period which saw a huge expansion in the cello and piano repertoire on A Golden Cello Decade 1878-1888 with Canadian pianist Connie Shih (Hyperion CDA68394_hyperion-records.co.uk/dc.asp?dc=D_CDA68394). Bruch’s Kol Nidrei Op.47 from 1881 opens the disc, the sumptuous richness of Isserlis’ 1726 “Marquis de Corberon” Strad heard to full effect. Olivia Jageurs adds the harp part. The 15-year-old Richard Strauss and the 30-year-old German composer Luise Adolpha Le Beau both submitted cello sonatas to an 1881 competition, but neither won. At least Le Beau had her Sonata in F Major Op.17 published, but Strauss withdrew his Sonata in F Major Op.6 and rewrote it in 1883; the original sonata heard here was finally published in 2020. Le Beau’s 1878 sonata is a rarely heard gem, and deserves to be much better known.

On Bridge/Britten: Viola Works the violist Helène Clement plays the 1843 Francesco Giussani viola, on loan from Britten Pears Arts that was owned by Frank Bridge and gifted by him to Benjamin Britten in 1939, calling the CD “a testament to both composers and the instrument that binds them all together.” She is accompanied by pianist Alasdair Beatson (Chandos CHAN 2022-47 chandos.net/products/catalogue/CHAN%2020247). Bridge’s Cello Sonata in D Minor from 1913-17 is honored here in Clement’s arrangement for viola. There is a Willow: Grouse aslant a Brook: Impression for Small Orchestra from 1927 was arranged for viola and piano by Britten in 1932. Mezzo-soprano Dame Sarah Connolly is the soloist in the Three Songs for Medium Voice, Viola and Piano from 1906-07, not published until 1982. The two Britten works are the 1930 Elegy for Solo Viola and the Lachrymae: Reflections on a Song of Dowland Op.48 from 1950, revised in 1970. The knowledge that both composers played this instrument and would have had its sound in mind when writing for viola certainly adds to the impact of an excellent CD.

The wonderful Steven Isserlis is back with another engrossing CD, this time celebrating a period which saw a huge expansion in the cello and piano repertoire on A Golden Cello Decade 1878-1888 with Canadian pianist Connie Shih (Hyperion CDA68394_hyperion-records.co.uk/dc.asp?dc=D_CDA68394). Bruch’s Kol Nidrei Op.47 from 1881 opens the disc, the sumptuous richness of Isserlis’ 1726 “Marquis de Corberon” Strad heard to full effect. Olivia Jageurs adds the harp part. The 15-year-old Richard Strauss and the 30-year-old German composer Luise Adolpha Le Beau both submitted cello sonatas to an 1881 competition, but neither won. At least Le Beau had her Sonata in F Major Op.17 published, but Strauss withdrew his Sonata in F Major Op.6 and rewrote it in 1883; the original sonata heard here was finally published in 2020. Le Beau’s 1878 sonata is a rarely heard gem, and deserves to be much better known.

Dvořák’s 4 Romantic Pieces Op.75 from 1887 are heard in an arrangement by Isserlis, and two Footnotes close the disc: Ernst David Wagner’s Kol Nidrei and Isaac Nathan’s Shadows, the new CD from cellist Lorenzo Meseguer and pianist Mario Mora features works by Fanny and Felix Mendelssohn, Clara Schumann and Gustav Jenner, the connection apparently being “people living in the shadow of other composers” (Eudora EUD-SACD-2202 eudorarecords.com).

Certainly Fanny and Clara were over-shadowed by their brother and husband respectively, and Jenner. Brahms’ only compositional student clearly qualifies, but it’s an extremely tenuous link to Felix, who seems to be regarded here as under-appreciated more than overshadowed.

No matter, for there’s so much to enjoy and admire on this disc, from Fanny’s lovely but infrequently performed Fantasia in G Minor through Felix’s Sonata No.2 in D Major Op.58 – its really tricky passage-work in the Molto Allegro e vivace finale handled superbly – to Clara’s Drei Romanzen Op.22 (originally for violin and piano and transcribed here by the duo) and Jenner’s unsurprisingly quite Brahmsian Sonata in D Major. Fine, rich playing and a beautifully full, clean and resonant recording make for a quite outstanding CD.

The knowledge that both composers played this instrument and would have had its sound in mind when writing for viola certainly adds to the impact of an excellent CD.

The wonderful Steven Isserlis is back with another engrossing CD, this time celebrating a period which saw a huge expansion in the cello and piano repertoire on A Golden Cello Decade 1878-1888 with Canadian pianist Connie Shih (Hyperion CDA68394_hyperion-records.co.uk/dc.asp?dc=D_CDA68394). Bruch’s Kol Nidrei Op.47 from 1881 opens the disc, the sumptuous richness of Isserlis’ 1726 “Marquis de Corberon” Strad heard to full effect. Olivia Jageurs adds the harp part. The 15-year-old Richard Strauss and the 30-year-old German composer Luise Adolpha Le Beau both submitted cello sonatas to an 1881 competition, but neither won. At least Le Beau had her Sonata in F Major Op.17 published, but Strauss withdrew his Sonata in F Major Op.6 and rewrote it in 1883; the original sonata heard here was finally published in 2020. Le Beau’s 1878 sonata is a rarely heard gem, and deserves to be much better known.

Dvořák’s 4 Romantic Pieces Op.75 from 1887 are heard in an arrangement by Isserlis, and two Footnotes close the disc: Ernst David Wagner’s Kol Nidrei and Isaac Nathan’s Shadows, the new CD from cellist Lorenzo Meseguer and pianist Mario Mora features works by Fanny and Felix Mendelssohn, Clara Schumann and Gustav Jenner, the connection apparently being “people living in the shadow of other composers” (Eudora EUD-SACD-2202 eudorarecords.com).

Certainly Fanny and Clara were over-shadowed by their brother and husband respectively, and Jenner. Brahms’ only compositional student clearly qualifies, but it’s an extremely tenuous link to Felix, who seems to be regarded here as under-appreciated more than overshadowed.

No matter, for there’s so much to enjoy and admire on this disc, from Fanny’s lovely but infrequently performed Fantasia in G Minor through Felix’s Sonata No.2 in D Major Op.58 – its really tricky passage-work in the Molto Allegro e vivace finale handled superbly – to Clara’s Drei Romanzen Op.22 (originally for violin and piano and transcribed here by the duo) and Jenner’s unsurprisingly quite Brahmsian Sonata in D Major. Fine, rich playing and a beautifully full, clean and resonant recording make for a quite outstanding CD.

The CD Ondulation: Bach & Kurtág features outstanding playing by guitarist Pedro Mateo Gonzalez (Eudora EUD-SACD-2202 eudorarecords.com). The three Bach works are the Lute Suite in C Minor BWV997, the Cello Suite in G Major BWV1007 and the Violin Partita No.2 in D Minor BWV1004. The Lute Suite is rhythmically bright, with crystal-clear ornamentation; the Cello Suite is sensitive and quite beautiful. There are some added bass notes and the occasional filling out of chords in the Partita, and brilliant clarity in the rapid runs in the challenging Chaconne.

First recordings of four extremely brief pieces from the Darabok a Gitarőskolának by the Hungarian composer György Kurtág (b.1926) as interludes between the Bach works. González is technically flawless, with a superb sense of line and phrase. With its beautifully clean playing and recording it’s as fine a guitar CD as I’ve heard lately. Yuri Liberzon is the guitarist on Konstantin Vassiliev Guitar Works 1, a recital of works by the Russian-born German composer that merge jazz, Russian folk music and contemporary Western trends in beautifully-crafted and entertaining short pieces (Naxos 8.574315 naxos.com/Search/KeywordSearchResults/?q=8.574315). One piece here – Fatum – is from 1996, with the remaining 11 composed between 2005 and 2019; three were written specifically for Liberzon. There are some fascinating and innovative percussive effects in the bossa nova-inspired Cavatina à Tom Jobim, and some lovely melodic writing in numbers like Rose in the Snow.

The three Bach works are the Lute Suite in C Minor BWV997, the Cello Suite in G Major BWV1007 and the Violin Partita No.2 in D Minor BWV1004. The Lute Suite is rhythmically bright, with crystal-clear ornamentation; the Cello Suite is sensitive and quite beautiful. There are some added bass notes and the occasional filling out of chords in the Partita, and brilliant clarity in the rapid runs in the challenging Chaconne.

First recordings of four extremely brief pieces from the Darabok a Gitarőskolának by the Hungarian composer György Kurtág (b.1926) as interludes between the Bach works. González is technically flawless, with a superb sense of line and phrase. With its beautifully clean playing and recording it’s as fine a guitar CD as I’ve heard lately. Yuri Liberzon is the guitarist on Konstantin Vassiliev Guitar Works 1, a recital of works by the Russian-born German composer that merge jazz, Russian folk music and contemporary Western trends in beautifully-crafted and entertaining short pieces (Naxos 8.574315 naxos.com/Search/KeywordSearchResults/?q=8.574315). One piece here – Fatum – is from 1996, with the remaining 11 composed between 2005 and 2019; three were written specifically for Liberzon. There are some fascinating and innovative percussive effects in the bossa nova-inspired Cavatina à Tom Jobim, and some lovely melodic writing in numbers like Cavatina and Rose in the Snow. Patrick O’Connell, Liberzon’s partner in the Duo Equilibrium is the second guitarist on Obrio and on the Two Russian Pieces that close the disc.

Recording quality, produced and edited by Norbert Kraft at St. Paul’s Anglican Church in Newmarket, Ontario is of the usual top-notch Naxos level.

Two elegiac piano trios honouring the memory of a close friend are featured on Elegie, the new CD from Trio Arriaga (Eudora EUD-SACD-2201 eudorarecords.com).

Tchaikovsky’s Piano Trio in A Minor Op.50 was composed in late 1881, the March 1882 premiere marking the first anniversary of the death of pianist Nikolai Rubinstein, founder of the Moscow Conservatory. It’s a large work with an interesting structure - a lengthy and rhapsodic opening Pezzo Elegiaco followed by an even longer Tema con variazioni, with virtuosic piano writing throughout.

Shostakovich’s 1944 Piano Trio No.2 in E Minor Op.67 was in memory of the death of Ivan Sollertinsky, artistic director of the Leningrad Philharmonic. More than a lament for a lost friend, the work also reflects the growing awareness of the Nazi wartime atrocities.

There’s outstanding playing and ensemble work throughout an excellent CD.

---

VOCAL

Lionel Daunais – Melodies/Songs
Jacqueline Woodley; Annina Haug; Pierre Rancourt; Marc Bourdeau; Michel Bellavance
Centrediscs CMCCD 30122 (cmccanada.org/shop/cd-cmccd-30122)

▶ Lionel Daunais (1901-1982) was a French-Canadian baritone and a prolific composer. As a founding member of notable ensembles such as the Trio lyrique and the Variétés lyriques, and via his other numerous musical activities and roles such as artistic and stage director, Daunais had a lengthy career and a meaningful influence on Quebec’s musical scene of the mid-20th century.

With Melodies, pianist Marc Bourdeau pays homage to Daunais’ legacy with a carefully considered curation of a large repertoire (over 250 songs). The final selection includes 27 songs that mix the diverse writing styles of art songs and popular songs with more traditional Quebec folkloric songs. Bourdeau’s impeccable research and care of Daunais’ musical intentions, guided both by his appreciation for Daunais and the time he spent in the archives of the Lionel Daunais Fonds, allow for an authentic rediscovery of this formidable artist. The detailed CD booklet is augmented by a website (LionelDaunais.com) with considerable documentation, useful material on Daunais’ career for possible further research, behind-the-scenes details, as well as videos of recordings and rehearsals.

Bourdeau’s collaborators are soprano Jacqueline Woodley, mezzo-soprano Annina Haug, baritone Pierre Rancourt and flute Michel Bellavance. In a variety of ensembles, duets and trios, they excel at recreating the gentle humour, and sometimes sarcasm, the depth and subtle meanings of texts, as well as the appropriate tones for themes of earlier times. Mélodies is not only a significant addition to the life, times and music of Lionel Daunais, it is also an important contribution to Quebec’s musical heritage.

Sophie Bisson

---

During the pandemic lockdown the Santa Rosa Symphony under Francesco Lecce-Chong presented a series of live concerts recorded for a virtual audience, with Ellen Taaffe Zwilich the featured composer. The new CD Ellen Taaffe Zwilich Cello Concerto & Other Works is devoted to works that were performed during those concerts (Delos DE 3596 delosmusic.com).

The Cello Concerto from 1999-20 is performed by Zuill Bailey, for whom it was commissioned. The third of its three fairly short movements in particular exploits the singing, lyrical nature of the instrument.

Elizabeth Dorman is the soloist in Peanuts® Gallery for Piano and Orchestra, six short pieces written in 1996 on commission for a Carnegie Hall children’s concert and featuring characters from the Charles Schulz cartoon strip.

Violinist Joseph Edelberg brings a warm, rich tone to the quite lovely 1993 Romance for Violin and Chamber Orchestra, and the Prologue and Variations for String Orchestra closes an entertaining disc.

What we’re listening to this month: thewholenote.com/listening

---

As mountain winds
David Eagle

Between Worlds
Margaret Maria and Donna Brown
A unique collaboration between two artists whose hearts are very much aligned. Donna Brown’s poetry and voice combined with Margaret Maria’s music and cellos

Bach Concertos
L’Harmonie des saisons, Eric Milnes
The JUNO Award-winning L’Harmonie des saisons returns with a brand new recording devoted to some of the best known concertos by J. S. Bach!

Franz Liszt: Rhapsodies, Études and Transcriptions
Sophie Agranovich
“Private intimacies and poetic delicacies that exist beneath the glitzy surfaces... Probing and profoundly moving... jaw-dropping virtuosity... sparkling magic.” - Fanfare Magazine

November 1 - December 13, 2022 | 49
Ottorino Respighi – Crepuscolo
Timothy Fallon; Ammiel Bushakevitz
BIS BIS-2632 SACD (bis.se)

- Respighi’s remarkably wide-ranging stylistic eclecticism in these 26 songs turns this CD into a bountiful sonic buffet offering a delectable array of variegated flavours.

The neo-Renaissance Cinque canti all’antiqua (Five Songs in Ancient Style) includes an aria from his opera Re Enzo and four plaintive love songs, three with texts by Boccaccio. The five extravagantly expressive songs of Deità Silvane (Woodland Deities) recall music by Debussy and Ravel, who also evoked sylvan myths, here replete with fauns and nymphs, cymbals and pipes, and mysterious dances. In the fifth song, Crepuscolo (Twilight), “Pan falls asleep... a joyful song quivers.” Inspired by a visit to Scotland, Respighi arranged his beguiling joyful song quivers. “Inspired by a visit to Scotland, Respighi arranged his beguiling joyful song quivers.” Inspired by a visit to Scotland, Respighi arranged his beguiling joyful song quivers. “Inspired by a visit to Scotland, Respighi arranged his beguiling joyful song quivers.”

The remaining six movements are set to sacred texts from the Latin Missa for the Dead. But Silvestrov has extracted fragments and jumbled them up. In the Agnus Dei, he revisits one of his strangest and most wonderful piano pieces, The Messenger. Invoking Mozart in style and spirit, it arrives mysteriously, an enigmatic dispatch bringing consolations from another world. A stirring performance by the Bavarian Radio Choir and the Munich Radio Orchestra under the adventurous Estonian conductor Andres Mustonen puts Silvestrov’s evocative harmonic shifts and uncanny colours into urgent focus.

Pamela Margles

Edie Hill; Michael Gilbertson – Born
The Crossing; Donald Nally
Navona Records nv6449 (navonarecords.com/catalog/nv6449)

- When classical radio stations seem agog with a cappella choral music who can fault them? After all, listening to human voices singing in multi-layered harmony sans instrumentum is, indeed, irresistible. But when you are led to believe that the world of a cappella music is Voces 8 and, seemingly, no one else, surely something is amiss? I mean what about The Crossing directed by the masterful Donald Nally? What indeed!

Consider the album titled Born featuring the work of the same name bookended by Returning – both by Michael Gilbertson – with a revenant interpretation of Edie Hill’s Spectral Spirits nestling in between. The two latter works have been commissioned especially for The Crossing, who return the favour with a magical performance from start to finish.

Gilbertson’s work is a mystical and transcendent fit for this mighty vocal ensemble. Nally and the singers navigate both works with absolute mastery. Born is an appropriately meditative unravelling of the evanescence of life. The gossamer-like Returning weaves epic narratives inspired by David and Jonathan. Hill’s Spectral Spirits dwell in light and dark. Perhaps they even summon the spectral shadow of Gérard Grisey.

Nally lets this music unfold with sumptuous expansiveness throughout. The polyphonic lines gracefully reveal themselves in this opulent recording. The singers of The Crossing produce a rich and wonderfully balanced sound, marvellous depth in the basses and a delectable fluidity in the sopranos. Truly this is a choir of great distinction.

Raul da Gama

Between Worlds
Donna Brown; Margaret Maria
Centrediscs CMCCD 30522 (cmccanada.org/shop/cd-cmccd-30522)

- Between Worlds is a collaboration between composer-cellist Margaret Maria and soprano-poet Donna Brown. With poems set specifically to music and others adapted into music to fit a theme, the creators tell us that this project “uses words and music to explore the tension between Thanatos and Eros via a symbolic journey from Sunset to Sunrise.”

In a series of eight movements set for soprano and cello orchestra, Sunset, Fall, Lady Moon, Snakes and Demons, Caught Between Worlds, To Grasp Time, Sunset and One, aim to awaken listeners to their inner and higher states of consciousness, make sense of the world, and, ultimately, search for light and peace with an open heart.

The movements each display styles and techniques that vary greatly: the voice moves from spoken (Sunset) and declamatory to complex extended vocals, while the cello(s) are at times thin, scattered and sparse (Sunrise, Sunset) or veer into more complex extended instrumental techniques (Snakes and Demons) and playing ponticello (Fall). The cello orchestra is created by Maria who overdues the different cello parts.

Donna Brown teaches voice at the Conservatoire de Musique de Montréal and her recordings have won several awards. Margaret Maria is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music and has played on numerous Canadian and international stages. Between Worlds received its world premiere in 2019 by the Ottawa Chamber Orchestra with a full complement of strings.

Sophie Bisson

Silvestrov – Requiem für Larissa
Solists; Chor des Bayerischen Rundfunks; Münchner Rundfunkorchester; Andreas Mustonen
BR Klassik BRK900344 (naxos.com/CatalogueDetail?id=900344)

- Valentin Silvestrov, Ukraine’s best-known living composer, wrote Requiem für Larissa in 1999 in response to the sudden death of his wife, Larissa Bondarenko. It’s a work of devastating beauty. Musical references to Silvestrov’s life with Bondarenko, a musicologist, reveal how deeply personal this work is. Yet it pulls us into the sweep of historical events. This new release, still just its second recording, was made in 2011. Today, with the attacks on the 85-year-old composer’s beloved homeland by Russia, Silvestrov’s Requiem resonates even more deeply. And the significance of this recording grows.

The searing fourth movement, Goodbye, O World, O Earth, Farewell directly recalls the fifth song from Silvestrov’s mesmerizing cycle for baritone and piano, Silent Songs. Here it’s a tenor who sings the poignant lament, set to an excerpt from The Dream by Ukraine’s national bard, 19th-century poet Taras Shevchenko. Andreas Hirtreiter communicates the composer’s pain and longing while heeding his constraints on interpretive flourishes.

The remaining six movements are set to sacred texts from the Latin Mass for the Dead. But Silvestrov has extracted fragments and jumbled them up. In the Agnus Dei, he revisits one of his strangest and most wonderful piano pieces, The Messenger. Invoking Mozart in style and spirit, it arrives mysteriously, an enigmatic dispatch bringing consolations from another world. A stirring performance by the Bavarian Radio Choir and the Munich Radio Orchestra under the adventurous Estonian conductor Andres Mustonen puts Silvestrov’s evocative harmonic shifts and uncanny colours into urgent focus.

Michael Schulman

Margaret Maria is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music and has played on numerous Canadian and international stages. Between Worlds received its world premiere in 2019 by the Ottawa Chamber Orchestra with a full complement of strings. Between Worlds is a collaboration between composer-cellist Margaret Maria and soprano-poet Donna Brown. With poems set specifically to music and others adapted into music to fit a theme, the creators tell us that this project “uses words and music to explore the tension between Thanatos and Eros via a symbolic journey from Sunset to Sunrise.”

In a series of eight movements set for soprano and cello orchestra, Sunset, Fall, Lady Moon, Snakes and Demons, Caught Between Worlds, To Grasp Time, Sunset and One, aim to awaken listeners to their inner and higher states of consciousness, make sense of the world, and, ultimately, search for light and peace with an open heart.

The movements each display styles and techniques that vary greatly: the voice moves from spoken (Sunset) and declamatory to complex extended vocals, while the cello(s) are at times thin, scattered and sparse (Sunrise, Sunset) or veer into more complex extended instrumental techniques (Snakes and Demons) and playing ponticello (Fall). The cello orchestra is created by Maria who overdues the different cello parts.

Donna Brown teaches voice at the Conservatoire de Musique de Montréal and her recordings have won several awards. Margaret Maria is a graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music and has played on numerous Canadian and international stages. Between Worlds received its world premiere in 2019 by the Ottawa Chamber Orchestra with a full complement of strings.

Sophie Bisson
Romances Inciertos – Un autre Orlando
Nino Laisné; François Chaignaud
Alborada editions ALB002 (alborada-editions.com)

In 2020, choreographer/dancer/singer François Chaignaud and stage/musical director/arranger Nino Laisné, along with their four virtuoso instrumentalists, recorded this high-quality in-studio release based on their show Romances inciertos, which they have toured internationally since 2017. The three-act dance stage show has Chaignaud and instrumentalists perform on stage together. Un autre Orlando is in three Acts, each featuring a popular traditional Spanish figure respectively – warrior maiden, archangel, and gypsy – set to centuries spanning Spanish musical traditions.

The band is a tight musical unit. Opening Act I is Laisné’s arrangement of Astor Piazzolla’s tango/pasacalle Tristeza de un doble A (1973) featuring bandoneonist Jean-Baptiste Henry’s calm rendition leading to intensity building of fast virtuosic lyrical lines above the other instruments. Act II’s Nana de Sevilla is a popular cradle song, with Romantic-flavoured instrumental improvisations using rubatos, held strings and fast lines, followed by the popular Baroque Follas, an improvisation driven by Pere Olivé’s percussion beats. Chaignaud also sings falsetto, and normal voice, in select songs like his well-placed lower-pitched vocals to strings backdrop by Daniel Zapico (guitar and theorbo) and François Joubert-Caillet (viola da gamba) in the Act III opening 1936 zambra, La farsa monea.

Romances Inciertos – Un autre Orlando
Nino Laisné; François Chaignaud
Alborada editions ALB002 (alborada-editions.com)

La Tarara

Popular coplas, pitched vocals. Featuring Chaignaud’s emotional higher-pitched vocals to -ring a set of tuned bells in a sequence) is an outstanding track.

Other Spanish musical styles on display include processional marches to Sephardic laments, folk music to zarzuela, all arranged and performed to perfection. This is a successful, timeless leap from theatre stage to a 16-track audio recording!

CLASSICAL AND BEYOND

Being Golden
Suzanne Shulman; Erica Goodman
Wolftone (shulmangoodman.bandcamp.com/album/being-golden)

Leading Canadian musicians on their respective instruments, flutist Suzanne Shulman and harpist Erica Goodman first played together in 1972. They’ve since enjoyed illustrious careers, performing with several generations of musicians. To commemorate their abiding musical friendship they commissioned Canadian–Scottish composer Eric N. Robertson to write The Rings to serve as an eight-movement centrepiece of Being Golden, their latest joint flute and harp album.

Robertson’s The Rings not only celebrates Shulman and Goodman’s 50th anniversary, but also the golden wedding anniversary of Shulman and her husband Peter. Robertson’s music features colourful arrangements of Scottish rhythms and dances such as reels and strathspeys arranged in a straightforward manner. Geometry of Love (Bells), the title of the final movement, takes an entirely different tack. The strikingly effective interpretation of change ringing (the practice of ringing a set of tuned bells in a sequence) is an outstanding track.

The balance of the record is devoted to French repertoire for the two instruments. Eloquently composed short works by ”impressionist” composers Claude Debussy and Maurice Ravel follow the retro-sounding and peppy 20th-century works by neoclassicists Jacques Londond and Jean Francaix. Four pensive works by Ravel deftly alter the album’s mood, particularly the concluding Deux mélodies héroïques. Shulman shines in a melismatic near- vocalise in Kaddisch, while the all-too-brief L’enigme éternelle questions the puzzle of existence with bi-tonal passages and a repetitive accompaniment. Is Ravel suggesting that pursuing the topic is futile? Whatever the answer, there’s much to listen to, think about and enjoy here.

Andrew Timar

Bach Concertos
L’Harmonie des saisons; Eric Milnes
ATMA ACD2 2853 (atmaclassique.com/en)

The talented combination of Quebec-born violinist Mélisande Corriveau and American harpsichordist and conductor Eric Milnes is a truly fortuitous one, which 12 years ago resulted in the formation of the Baroque ensemble L’Harmonie des saisons. Founded in Granby, Quebec the group has since earned considerable critical acclaim and has appeared at festivals throughout Canada, the United States, Europe and South America, and has been the recipient of two Juno and two Opus awards. This newest recording presenting an all-Bach program is further evidence of the group’s merit.

The Concerto for Two Violins BWV1043 and that for solo violin BWV1041 were probably written for a concert series Bach organized.

What we’re listening to this month: thewholenote.com/listening as the director of the Collegium Musicum in Leipzig. Soloists Julia Wedman (from Toronto’s Tafelmusik) and Jessy Dubé (with Wedman in the solo concerto) deliver stylish and spirited performances, the phrasing always thoughtfully articulated, while the ensemble provides a solid partnership.

The Concerto BWV1055 is most often performed on a keyboard instrument, but scholars indicate that it was probably originally scored for oboe d’amore as is heard here. There is much to admire in oboist Matthew Jennejohn’s bright and clear tone both in this concerto and in BWV1060 where he’s joined by Wedman.

Milnes takes his place at the harpsichord for the Concerto In D Major BWV1054, the third of seven Bach wrote for solo keyboard. Here, soloist and ensemble are a formidable pairing with Milnes playing with a solid assurance and the slow movement particularly well rendered.

Fine sound quality further enhances a fine performance of some familiar repertoire. Bien fait, one and all – let’s hear from you again.

Richard Haskell

Mozart – Complete Piano Sonatas Vol.2 & 3

Orli Shaham

Canary Classics CC21 (canaryclassics.com)

For trumpeters studying and performing Western Art Music, at a certain point the extant literature of canonic repertoire gets somewhat thin. “How many times,” a classical trumpeter may ask themselves somewhat frustratedly, “do I need to perform the Brandenburg?” This is not so for pianists who have what seems like a bottomless pit of challenging, crowd-pleasing and technically instructive repertoire to mine as part of their studies or professional concertizing. As such, it is inspiring when you encounter a pianist, such as the talented and newly minted Juilliard faculty member Orli Shaham, who has taken on the yeoman’s task of releasing multiple-disc Mozart recordings in order to put her own stamp on this well-known and beloved music, and establish herself, as The Chicago Tribune noted, as a “first-rate Mozartian.”

With her latest double-disc release, Complete Piano Sonatas Volume 2 & 3 on the Canary Classics label, listeners find the gifted musician in fine form, picking up from where she left off with volume one and setting the stage for the remaining recordings to be released next year. Exhibiting a deft touch and the sort of keen eye for specific nuance and detail that these piano sonatas require, fans of top-shelf piano performance and solo classical repertoire will find much to enjoy here. Particular mention should be made to the beautiful sound, acoustic purity and recorded 24-bit capture of Shaham’s Steinway at Mechanics Hall in Worcester, Massachusetts.

Andrew Scott

Fanny and Felix Mendelssohn

Kaleidoscope Chamber Collective

Chandos CHAN 20256 (chandos.net/products/catalogue/CHAN%2020256)

The string of Richard Wagner’s bitter anti-Semitic missive had a numbing effect on the true appreciation for Felix Mendelssohn’s music. It was probably worse so for Fanny Mendelssohn who had to also deal with the patriarchy of European society, not dissimilar to the lack of recognition for Clara Schumann among other women of the period.

The repertoire performed by the Kaleidoscope Chamber Collective proffers a snapshot of filial Mendelssohn genius. Think then of this recording of chamber works as the most recent delectable musical presentation of Mendelssohnian hors’d’oeuvres; the suggestion also being that (hopefully) there is much more to come.

Kaleidoscope give a touchingly emotional account of Fanny’s String Quartet in A-flat Major H-U 55 whose harmonic richness and subdued melancholy reveal both a debt and contrast to her brother’s exquisitely way with form and structure. Her later Trio In D-Minor Op. 11 H-U 465 displays a remarkably wide range of touch and timbre especially magical in the whispered delicacy of its Lied movement.

Felix Mendelssohn’s Sextet in D Major, Op. post. 110 MWV Q 16 came a whole year before his revolutionary String Octet in E-flat Major. Like its worthy successor, what clinches the greatness of this sextet is the buoyant jubilation and tight fugal construction, which gives it a power equalled by few other finales in chamber music. This is beautifully fresh and energetic music-making from a quite extraordinary ensemble.

Raul da Gama

Franz Liszt – Rhapsodies, Etudes and Transcriptions

Sophia Agranovich

Centaur Records CRC 3955 (centaurrecords.com)

Now here is a disc I would listen to over and over again, never wanting it to end. An award-winning very talented Ukrainian-American pianist, Sophia Agranovich plays Liszt as it should be played, totally imbued in Romantic spirit and with “interpretation daring to be different” and “superior musicianship” (American Record Guide).

Fanny, I remember British critics around the 50s who poo-pooed Liszt, held him second rate and overtly emotional. They should eat their words when they hear this performance. This is her tenth release and entirely devoted to Liszt showing the many sides of the composer’s genius and all devilishly difficult pieces. Imagine a Budapest cafe with an ever present gypsy (Roma) band and the lead violinist coming to your table and playing the “artsiest” of art films at the Revue, Fox or Carlton Cinemas, I remember liking Philip Kaufman’s The Unbearable Lightness of Being with Daniel Day-Lewis and Juliette Binoche. Upon initial viewing, I subsequently pushed out to get my hands on Czech beer and a well-thumbed copy of the original Milan Kundera novel, released a few years before the film. And while much was memorable about that movie, I remember being particularly struck by how effectively the film used music (almost exclusively Leos Janáček’s On an Overgrown Path). Accordingly, it is nice to rediscover Janáček’s haunting cycle of piano pieces, paired here with the 24 Preludes of Frederic Chopin, for a satisfying new release on Eudora records.

Although their lives almost overlapped briefly – Chopin died in 1849 while Janáček was born in 1854 – they did not. That said, the extraordinary compositions and musical talents of the more famous Polish composer and those of the Czech composer and theorist are united here in the capable hands of Italian pianist Domenico Codispoti. If, as the liner notes to this terrific new recording suggest, Codispoti views himself as a kind of earthly vessel through which the music and composer intentions flow while guided by Chopin’s ghosts and demons, as well as, one supposes, Janáček’s spirit leading him down a silent street in Moravia, 2022 auditors are encouraged to listen in on these two master composers presented in this most excellent translated form.

Andrew Scott

Notebook – Chopin & Janáček

Domenico Codispoti

Eudora Records EUD-SACD-2203 (eudorarecords.com)

As a teenager, when I was doing my best to convince myself that I liked to smoke clove cigarettes, wear vintage second-hand clothing and his heart out for your wife or girlfriend. This is what we hear when Agranovich plays the slow middle section of Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6. The style is unmistakably Hungarian with the rubatos, hesitations, sudden eru- pitive accelerandos and syncopations and we even hear the tremolo of the cimbalom in the background. It’s interesting that then she chooses the slow, quiet, melodic No. 13, seldom performed but in her hands proba- bly the most beautiful of all the Hungarian Rhapsodies.

This is followed by three Schubert Transcriptions, (Ständchen, Erlkönig and Die Forelle); when I was listening to the famous Ständchen (Serenade) I was so transported that I felt like exclaiming “Wow, this is too beautiful!”

Agranovich’s astounding technique is further evident in the dramatic and exciting Mazeppa of the Transcendental Etudes based on the story of a Ukrainian nobleman punished by being dragged by a wild horse across the steppes. We hear the lightning flashes of the whip and the syncopated galloping rhythm in this immensely diffi- cult piece, which provides a fitting end to this unique, opulent and rewarding new issue.

Maurice Ravel – Concertos pour piano; Mélodies
Cédric Tiberghien, Stéphane Degout, Les Siècles, François-Xavier Roth
Harmonia Mundi HMM902612 (store.harmioniumundi.com/release/303588)

This interesting new recording of Ravel’s piano music has already earned Gramophone magazine’s Recording of the Month. It includes Ravel’s two piano concertos as well as that composer’s rarely heard songs showing his all-encompassing genius. Not only a composer for orchestra, opera, ballets and the piano, he was also a brilliant orches- tractor, pianist and even a song writer par excellence.

The journey begins with the “marvellous” Piano Concerto in G Major (so described by Francis Poulenc, who actually played the orchestral part when the concerto was first performed on two pianos at a private salon), one of the first truly modern 20th-century concertos. Sparkling and buoyant with jazzy elements, it is superbly performed by pianist Cédric Tiberghien who is already having a brilliant career here and in Europe. The conductor is the very busy François-Xavier Roth, by now a very important musical figure in charge of several orchestras and guest conductor of several others. Noteworthy is the fact that the piano is an authentic Pleyel from 1892!

In the dark-hued Piano Concerto for the Left Hand in D Major, it’s amazing how much bravura and complexity a single hand can accomplish. Its single movement begins in a mysterious atmosphere, moving from dark- ness into light (à la Liszt), with one inci- sive and versatile theme that develops with a strong rhythmic drive, literally exploding triumphantly at the end.

The two concertos serve as bookends for three song cycles, including one which I find as a curiosity, Deux mélodies hébraïques. The Kaddisch with its emotionally charged Hebrew text, but music entirely by Ravel, is a prayer of mourning usually heard in the synagogue; the other, in Yiddish, L’énigme synagogale; the other, in Yiddish, Kaddisch, as a curiosity, finds beautiful expression in baritone Stéphane Degout’s moving interpretation.

Mahler – Symphony No. 4
Sabine Devieilhe; Les Siècles; Francois-Xavier Roth
Harmonia Mundi HMM905357 (store.harmoniumundi.com)

▶ The French conductor François-Xavier Roth is in great demand these days, and for good reason. Recently appointed music director of the peerless Garrnchen-Orchester in Cologne and principal guest conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra, among his notable accomplishments was his founding of the Les Siècles orchestra in 2003, featuring instruments appropriate to the period of composition of a given era. Their 2013 rendition of the original version of Stravinsky’s Rite of Spring garnered immense praise.

They now turn their attention for the second time to the music of Mahler. The excellent program notes include an inter- view with Roth, an overview of the work, and a scrupulous listing of the exact models of the wind instruments employed. The pier- cing sound of the wind instruments and the beefy sound of the period Viennese horns are particularly impressive, much more assertive and biting than our homogenized contem- porary models. The string section employs gut strings and plays without vibrato, bringing an unaccustomed serenity to the slow third movement. Combined with Roth’s Apollonian interpretation, the complex counterpoint of the work benefits greatly. The mixing of the album is superb and Sabine Devielhe’s inter- pretation of the vocal finale is admirable.

My only reservation about this performance concerns an occasional lack of nuance, noticeably so in the uncanny second move- ment scherzo, which struck me as more of a generic waltz as opposed to the idiomatic micro-adjustments of the authentic Ländler tempo George Szell imparts in his classic 1967 recording. This symphony is the most compact and classical in Mahler’s oeuvre and remains the most accessible entry point for Mahler neophytes. Not to be missed!

What we’re listening to this month: thewholenote.com/listening

Daniel Foley

Bruckner – Symphony No.4
London Symphony Orchestra; Sir Simon Rattle
LSO Live LSO00875 (lso.co.uk)

► I’ve seen Sir Simon Rattle conduct many times thanks to my subscription to the Berlin Philharmonic’s Digital Concert Hall and always admired his energy jumping to the podium full of excitement, eager anticipation and love for the music to come. In 2018 Rattle retired from his post in Berlin and now is back in England as the head of the London Symphony, arguably the finest of the five London orchestras.

The “Romantic” Symphony No.4 is obviously his favorite Bruckner and as I listen to this new super audio recording I must confess that I’d love to have been present at the concert at the Barbican Hall resounding with the genuine bloom of his Bruckner. “The entire evening was a Brucknerian labour of love” says The Guardian.

Rattle has a no-nonsense approach as if he would say: let’s get on with it! He is totally relaxed, lets the music flow naturally at a brisk tempo, entirely logical with the architactonic structure always kept in mind. There are sections when the music becomes nearly inaudible from which the melody slowly emerges. The following crescendo is masterfully handled. It builds in stages with minor climaxes along the way, deliberately holding back at key moments so the ending becomes truly majestic. There is an overarching epic sweep this symphony needs.

I must give a big credit to the first (solo) horn. At the beginning, its beautifully sustained pianissimo over an underlying tremolo in the strings produces a magical effect. The horns also feature heavily in the third movement, the Hunt Scherzo, as they start out barely audible from a primeval mist with a gradual crescendo; and when the trumpets join in the sound becomes crystal clear fortissimo and simply gorgeous. In Rattle’s hand the symphony becomes truly Romantic!

Janos Gardonyi

Two Sides
Barokkbandið Brák
Sono Luminus SLE-70026/2 (sonoluminus.com)

► It is not uncommon to find obvious and straightforward album titles within the classical music genre, leaving no doubt as to what a listener can and should expect. If one tallied up all the releases titled Beethoven: The Nine Symphonies, these recordings would make up an entire collection of their own. While it is only an entry point to the contents contained therein, a creatively titled recording can engage and entice a prospective listener, drawing them in with the promise of a unique artistic experience.

Such is the case with Icelandic period-instrument ensemble Barokkbandið Brák and their debut album Two Sides, a title which, at first glance, most clearly refers to its two discs of music. Upon reviewing its contents however, it becomes clear that Two Sides reflects the diverse nature of this extraordinary group, which has achieved renown in the interpretation of Renaissance and Baroque music but also as a commissioner of new music for period instruments.

This sense of discovery in music old and new permeates every selection on this recording, notably through the world premiere recording of the Violin Concerto in G by Swedish Baroque composer Johan Joachim Agrell and new commissions from Icelandic composers Ólafur Helgason, Bergur Snæbjörnsdóttir, and Kristinn Kristinsson.

What is most remarkable about this entire double album is the way in which every piece of music is treated individually, performed at the highest level with convincing interpretations. Whether the Agrell Concerto premiere, Vivaldi’s enthralling Concerto for 2 Violins & Cello In D Minor, or any one of the commissioned works, nothing seems unfamiliar or out of place.

Two Sides is a magnificent debut from Barokkbandið Brák that will be a valuable addition to any collection, especially for those who appreciate broad and diverse repertoire within the realm of period performance.

Matthew Whitfield

The Americanist
Elizabeth Newkirk
Bright Shiny Things BSTC-0166 (brightshiny.ninja)

► This new release of orchestral scores reduced for solo piano by Elizabeth Newkirk stakes out grounds for how American music must maintain its connection to the vernacular. Per Newkirk’s lengthy treatise in the liner notes, the mythos of America demands inclusion and recognition of popular musical idioms in the making of “serious” music.

She especially points to the styles and forms developed in the African-American culture that energizes so much of today’s music. To that end, Newkirk provides three intra-bellum works that illustrate her point, all reductions of orchestral scores made by the composers themselves, and all infused with jazz and blues.

Maurice Ravel’s reduction in some ways satisfies the way the full version can’t. In La Valse Newkirk proves herself a fine stylist, giving a more flexible version in terms of rhythm and dynamics than a conductor might ask of a full orchestra. These waltzes swoop into dips and pirouettes. (I leave it to pianists to tell me if I’m wrong about the heavy use of the sustain pedal). Gershwin’s An American in Paris is also entirely about movement. Newkirk notes that three distinct metres are assigned respectively to the American, French and British gait. (It’s so hard to believe the piece wasn’t written with Gene Kelly in mind). More than in the Ravel, I miss orchestral colours; maybe it’s just that Gershwin’s lightness needs the weight of the band, but to my mind, there’s no replacing the trumpet, the violins, the rhythm section. Their language is integral to the musical ideas.

William Grant Still’s Africa provides the substantial finale to the disc. Still’s music follows a similar aesthetic to Gershwin’s, blending Romantic tropes with blues influences. Materially, and in terms of length, it’s more substantial than the Gershwin, and more listenable, in fact. As has been noted elsewhere, there are not nearly enough recordings of his music, which makes this release so attractive.

Newkirk’s treatise is most interesting when she leaves the rarified discussion of myth and philosophy in order to discuss how these three works fit so neatly into her thesis.

Max Christie
Cantius
Gail Archer
Swan Studios MM22051
(meyer-media.com)

The pipe organ has been a vital part of musical history for centuries, and there are a small number of countries that have made tremendously impactful contributions to its physical construction and musical lineage, including the German Baroque composers (culminating in the works of J.S. Bach) and the 19th- and 20th-century French school, which led to the development of the organ symphony. With a heritage dominated by musical monoliths, it is easy to forget that there is worthwhile organ music written by composers in other countries not immediately considered synonymous with the pipe organ, including the Baltic States, Russia and Poland. It is this latter country that receives organist Gail Archer’s full focus on Cantius, a recording which presents highlights from two centuries of Polish composers and their works, ranging from Romantic symphonies to avant-garde masterpieces. Highlights include Felix Nowowiejski’s Symphony No.8 which, although written in one movement, is in three distinct sections, including a solemn funeral march, and Henryk Górecki’s Kantata. Górecki is perhaps Poland’s most famous 20th-century composer, whose Third Symphony – “Symphony of Sorrowful Songs” achieved international recognition and established his place as one of the most important contemporary composers of the time.

Although many consider the pipe organ to be an old instrument that plays old music, there is still new material being written today, and it is wonderful to encounter a variety of 20th- and 21st-century composers and their works on Cantius, expertly interpreted by Archer. It is not an easy feat to achieve convincing performances of high-density modern scores, but she does so with apparent ease and undeniable success.

Matthew Whitfield

American pianist Josh Tatsuo Cullen performs a respectful tribute to African-American composer Florence Price (1887-1953) in seven of her solo piano works. Price, educated at the New England Conservatory, combined European classical music with American traditions including ragtime and boogie woogie in her over 300 compositions for various instruments – from symphonies to vocal music. Her music is currently enjoying a renaissance.

The three-movement Scenes in Tin Can Alley (1928) opens with the energetic ragtime-influenced The Huckster. Price wrote program notes for the following movement, Children at Play. Kids play to energetic sounds until a slower melodic classical/pop sound has them stop to stare at an old woman looking for food. After a short silence, she leaves and the kids play again, to fun and fast piano. Price’s notes for Night include “the scene is sordid” with slow low-pitched, faster lines and swells featuring Cullen’s beautifully articulated calming phrase endings. Cullen’s amazing performance of the most virtuosic work here, Cotton Dance (Presto) (ca.1940s), is fast fast fast with boogie woogie sounds, chromatic lines/harmonies, high pitches and classical undertones making for fun dancing and listening. In the recently discovered five short Preludes (1926-1932) Price uniquely did not use descriptive titles. Many compositional techniques here, like No.3’s Allegro molto’s faster almost songlike quality to No.4’s Wistful. Allegretto con tenerezza’s slower classical sound featuring Cullen’s conversational solo playing between hands.

Price’s stylistically varied compositions are accessible listening, made all the more fantastic by Cullen’s inspired and detailed piano interpretations.

Tiina Kiik

Prérences Lointaines Vol. 2
Andrew Zhou
Solstice FY SOCD 394 (andrew-zhou.com)

Vladimir Jankelevitch, who lived from 1903 to 1985, was a French philosopher and musician who enjoyed a long academic career both in Prague and in Paris. He had definite ideas concerning music, among them that the art form was the only path to eternal life. Prérences Lointaines – Distant Presences pays him a worthy tribute with a program of French piano music spanning a 300-year period performed by American Andrew Zhou. Zhou was a second-prize winner at the Concours International de Piano d’Orleans and is currently a visiting lecturer at Cornell University.

Elisabeth-Claude Jacquet de la Guerre was a cousin of François Couperin and also an accomplished musician in her own right. Her seven-movement Suite in D Minor from the Pièces de Clavecin of 1707 is strong evidence of her skill as a composer and Zhou delivers an elegant and precise performance, at all times carefully nuanced.

Ravel is the only familiar composer on the disc, and his Prelude from 1913 – his shortest piece, lasting a mere minute and 13 seconds – is a languorous essay, while the Etude en blanc No.2 Elegie (Hommage à Ravel) by Didier Rotella (born in 1982) for prepared piano is hauntingly atmospheric.

What we’re listening to this month: thewholenote.com/listening

Rich In Symbols II - The Group Of Seven, Tom Thomson & Emily Carr
Chet Doxas
The music for this group is composed as Chet visits museums and stands in front of his favorite works with blank manuscript paper.

Six-ish Plateaus
Triio
In Triio’s latest release we delve into experimenting with the potentialities of groove and form within a jazz idiom, while retaining an organic character.

The Equation of Time
The Charke-Cormier Duo
The album exemplifies the power of music to explore the relationship between time, space, and the moments in-between through three deeply connected musicians.

REMEMBER THE AUDIO
MONKEY HOUSE
Remember the Audio is sophisticated pop for now people, and a new high-water mark in Monkey House’s musical journey.
early part of his life as both sailor and musician. He later earned a reputation as both an operatic composer and administrator. His Piano Sonata from 1905 is very much in the French late Romantic tradition requiring formidable dexterity on the part of the performer, but Zhou handles the challenges with an uncompromising technique, bringing the disc to a rousing conclusion.

Richard Haskell

Ludwig: vol. 3 b9 orchestra
fonsy (fonsy.bandcamp.com)

As is heard in all his creations, John Oswald's musical vision is remarkably original. Here, in his latest Rascali Kleptoire release, Oswald’s knowledgeable artistic creativity conquers, quotes, mimics and refrages from all nine Beethoven symphonies into a 30-minute four-movement compilation with the intent to surprise. He guides and produces his self-described “artificial-intelligence infused” synthetic orchestra, including winds, strings, horns, percussion and vocals, using the NotePerformer engine, produced by Wallander Instruments of Stockholm. It “includes its own sounds encompassing a large-scale modern symphonic orchestra” based on “technologies bridging the gap between samples and synthesis.”

The opening canto is tonal, technically detailed, with strict tempos and not much volume variation except for sudden loud crashing sections. In the shortest section bade, Oswald’s bits- and pieces-collection of loud percussion, slow sections and moving string lines is an interesting cross section of his and Beethoven’s writing. Love the contrasting instrumental lines in though. In venerable, Beethoven fans will love how Oswald juxtoposes familiar fragments to make a new sound, especially from Beethoven’s famous vocals.

Three bonus items are also included. A bootleg recording of a live b9 performance is a welcome addition with the to-be-expected real instrument subtleties also illuminating how well the synthetic orchestra version works. Concentrated following of the 44-page full musical score, prepared by John Abram, (not including an updated final page), aids listening to the whirwind music. Oswald’s 2000-word interview discusses his creative process here.

Throughout, Oswald’s quotes and juxtapositions of his own and Beethoven’s music are incredibly smart and well produced, and they sound better and better with each repeated listening!

Tiina Kilk

MODERN AND CONTEMPORARY

Landmarks
Katelyn Clark; Isaiah Ceccarelli
Another Timbre at 192
(anothertimbre.com)

After reflecting on some recorded improvisations, Katelyn Clark and Isaiah Ceccarelli release an album of jointly composed works for organ and percussion. The eight tracks on the recording unfold as dreamy sonic apparitions that unfold and enrapture. This immersive listening experience begins with the opening track Bells – an ominous ten-minute journey of undulating sonora and distant rumbles, providing a haunting and beautiful sonic mass below relentless mid-range organ fields.

In tracks such as Landmarks, Landforms and Chapparral, the wonderful patience and restraint in the music universe listener to remove themselves from the immediate and to allow the sounds to untangle in the mind that hasn’t been examined or confronted. One finds sombre reprise in Improvisation on Kyrie Eleison and Improvisation on a quarter where blurry polyphonic relics live among the hazy ashes of drone debris. The towering 20-minute Five Distances is arresting in its glacial insistence to live in a space where observable sensation lives more in imagination than in reality.

With their sensitive and delicate playing, Clark and Ceccarelli carefully unravel a path of feral resonances where listening begins when listening ends. All in all, this release is a deeply meaningful ambient odyssey capturing slowly falling auditory masses strewn in veins of afferent emissions that circle and deliberate in the basin of the most transcendent of listening experiences.

Adam Scime

Quiver
loadbang
New Focus Recordings FCR342
(newfocusrecordings.com)

The fourth release by this New York City-based ensemble features an eclectic collection of works commissioned from composers friendly to the group, Quinn Mason, Heather Stebbins, Chaya Czernowin and ZongYun We, and three ensemble members, Jeffrey Gaveri, Carlos Cordeiro and Andy Kozar.

The first track, titled Aging and composed by Mason, is a miniature featuring baritone voice in a decidedly lyrical style – a suitable palate cleanser to begin what unfolds to be an album of dynamic works and pristine performances. Stebbins’ Quiver is clever and punchy. Undulating bass clarinet pulses lurk beneath nocturnal jibs and quirks projected as vocalizations from the ensemble members. This music is highly creative - the bare nature of the orchestration illuminates the highly effective doublings of noise and sustained colour. Distorted honks and rhythmic bloops permeate Disquiet composed by Cordeiro, a work that recalls a Stravinskian sensibility with its lilting and unrelenting vocal part layered over various pattern-play. The dusty soundscapes of ZongYun We’s Flower evoke mysterious sonic corridors through which Messiaen’s masterpiece is accompanied by Enescu’s Carillon Nocturne, Knussen’s Prayer Bell Sketch and a selection from Britten’s massive Harrison’s Clocks. With both soloists captivating audiences around the world, this release is a treat for listeners who appreciate large works with a pianistic virtuosity. While the selected works certainly have their obvious comparisons with respect to towering vertical chords and striking timbre, each piece creates interesting and unexpected contrasts and connections – one work mapping new meaning onto another as filtered through breathtaking pianism. With each work presenting mighty musical edifices often remaining in emotional distress or ecstasy (or both), the high level of performance perfectionism reveals the importance of the overall structures without allowing the heavy emotional content to blur the composers’ poetic intentions.

If Messiaen’s work is meant to represent hope in dark times, one can certainly use this recording as a temporary respite from the gloomy state of current affairs – the two pianists deliver with extraordinary bravura making even Messiaen’s joyful and ecstatic offerings shine with new light.

Adam Scime
Houses of the Wind
John Luther Adams
Cold Blue Music CB0063
(coldbluemin.com)

The eerie vibrations created by Aeolian (wind) harps provide the central source of inspiration and sonic material for John Luther Adams’ latest release, Houses of the Wind. The album is a meditative journey in five wind-swept movements that transfix and bend all sense of the present moment. Using a series of layered field recordings of his own Aeolian harp, Adams creates slowly unfolding and otherworldly shimmerings as if slowly floating through a cave of gypsum. Low rumbles form as glacial shimmerings as if slowly floating through a mountainous cave of gypsum. Low rumbles form as glacial resonances that crystalize into mountainous and radiating spectral forms. The gentle ambience of this sound world is at once distant hopelessness and point blank serenity.

This duality of despair and transcendence permeates throughout, creating a liminal experience for the listener. As one who advocates for the health of the earth, Adams provides a reminder of nature’s fragile and yet tremendous force. But rather than a didactic offering, Adams invites us to pause and think about the space we inhabit. A convergence of music, emotion and nature, this release provides a sense of longing but also peace.

Adam Scime

John Adams
Tonhalle Orchester Zürich; Paavo Järvi
Alpha ALPHAD74 (outhere-music.com/en/labels/alpha-classics)

John Adams (b.1947) has long been considered among today’s leading American composers, particularly after the success of his opera Nixon in China (1987) and the controversial The Death of Klinghoffer (1991). This album of four orchestral works was the fruit of his 2021-22 Residency with the Tonhalle-Orchester Zürich directed by Paavo Järvi.

Having discovered musical minimalism in the 1970s, Adams’ works characteristic of that style include the fanfare-like Tromba Lontana (1985/86). Adams’ compositional style has since continuously evolved, incorporating numerous musical influences including numerous Western classical as well as vernacular American styles: jazz, pop and rock.

In the 1990s Adams produced the brilliantly orchestrated, effervescent Slonimsky’s Earbox, in part drawing on early-period Stravinsky stylistic cues. Adams retroactively observed that the work points “toward a successful integration of the older minimalist techniques (repetitive motifs, steady background pulse and stable harmonic areas) and the more complex, more actively contrapuntal language of the post-Klinghoffer pieces.” Järvi demonstrates a sure command of the work’s web of stylistic allusions.

The rollicking Lollapalooza was also composed in 1995. Today the American word “lollapalooza” means something oversized and perhaps outlandish, features reflected in Adam’s exuberant music.

Adams considers his three-part tone poem My father Knew Charles Ives his “Proustian madeleine, although one with a Yankee flavor.” In this complex mature orchestral work, Adams draws on his New England heritage, specifically reflecting the Connecticut composer Ives’ prevailing musical influence.

This outstanding portrait of Adams’ orchestral oeuvre is a fine way to celebrate the composer’s 75th birthday.

Andrew Timar

Lou Harrison – Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin
Kate Stenberg
Other Minds Records OM 1036-2
(otherminds.org)

With roots back to Bach’s Sonatas and Partitas, Paganini’s Caprices and Eugene Ysaye’s Sonatas, the continuous stream of solo violin compositions is among Western classical music’s highlights. This premiere recording of American composer Lou Harrison’s concise early-career Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin (1936) makes a convincing case for a niche in that rich canon. Composed when Harrison was a precocious teenage composition student, it’s tempting to locate this adventurous modernist work within the genre’s lineage. It’s interesting to note that Bartók’s iconic Sonatina for Solo Violin was composed some eight years later.

In three tightly-knit movements Harrison’s Sonata employs aspects of the 12-tone compositional technique he was studying at the time with Henry Cowell, which Harrison characteristically modified. Aggressively dissonant fanfare-like chords open the work, which segue to angular melodies. The score also introduces glissandi, alluding to a microtonal musical landscape which Harrison extensively explored in his later work to influential effect.

The second movement maintains the texture of angular chromaticism spiked with glissandi, enlivened however with dance-friendly rhythms. (It’s relevant to mention that Harrison was an avid dancer.) My favourite movement is the soft and mysterious-sounding finale which introduces pizzicati and returns to previously stated motifs. The work eloquently evaporates into silence with an interval of a falling major third.

New music violin-specialist Kate Stenberg’s committed and assured performance sets the bar high for this work. Is Harrison’s seven-minute Sonata too short to merit the jewel-box CD treatment it gets here? I’d say it’s just the right, satisfying length.

Andrew Timar
Weather Systems I – A Hard Rain
Steven Schick
Islandia Music Records IMR011
(islandiamusicshop.com)

- The 2CD
Weather Systems
I: A Hard Rain
features outstanding solo performances by Steven Schick (b.1954), a Percussion Hall of Famer who has long championed contemporary percussion music. The genesis of the album arose during the COVID-19 pandemic. During the lockdown Schick revisited “the foundational works for solo percussion, many of which I have played for nearly 50 years.” This became the starting point for A Hard Rain.

It opens with a vivid recording of John Cage’s 27’10.554” for a percussionist, a work Schick describes as “a rainforest of sounds: of water, earth, and air; of rip-sawn wood and ancient metal.”

Karlheinz Stockhausen’s Zyklus’ use of the cycle motif appears in the spatial layout of the instruments: in a circle around the solo percussionist. I hear echoes of Cold War tensions in Schick’s nervous rendition. Morton Feldman’s The King of Denmark on the other hand is a world removed aesthetically from Stockhausen’s Euro angst, inviting the musician to approach the work with soft, sparse, almost meditative gestures.

For his final track Schick uses only his voice to give a dramatic 32-minute performance of Ursonate (1922–32). Kurt Schwitters’ four-movement “sonata in primal sounds.” Schick collaborated with electronic musician Shahrokh Yadegari to present this milestone sound poem with the aid of effective interactive loops, layerings and treatments of his voice.

Schick writes that the non-sense of Schwitters’ Ursonate “is actually the language of crisis,” echoing the destruction of war, as well as serving as a post-Dadaist provocation. Coming after a program of signature solo percussion works, this tour-de-force version of Ursonate challenges listeners to expand their notions of what percussion music is – and can be.

Andrew Timar

Perspectives
Third Coast Percussion
Cedille CDR 90000 210
(cedillerecords.org)

- Perspectives takes listeners on a stylistically wide-ranging, musically rewarding, journey. The opening four-movement Percussion Quartet by prolific film composer Danny Elfman effectively juxtaposes the warm wooden sound of the marimba with the sharp sounds of pitched metal pipes and tubular bells, the work very effectively rendered by Chicago’s Third Coast Percussion.

Phillip Glass’ Metamorphosis No.1, originally for piano solo is here arranged for TCP. Beginning darkly with repeated low marimba eight-note chords, the arrangement blooms to include electronic organ, vibraphone, tubular bells, decorated with glockenspiel and crotales sparkles. A wistful major key melodica melody floats over the bubbling percussion along the way.

Rubix is a playful three-movement collaboration between TCP and flutists Nathalie Joachim and Allison Loggins-Hull, collectively known as Flutronix. Rubix imaginatively overlaps the short sonic envelopes of keyboard percussion with the sustained melodies of the duo flutes.

Electronic music producer Jilin’s impressive seven-part Perspective highlights TCP’s conceptual, arranging and performing strengths. The work draws on a style of electronic music and dance known as footwork. Born in Chicago’s underground dance competitions and house parties it’s marked by hyper-fast tempos.

Perspective originated as a series of electronic tracks produced by Jilin. Collaborating with the composer, TCP arranged an imaginative scoring from that material scored for an acoustic batterie over 30 (mostly) percussion instruments. The result is not only a feast for the ears and mind but sections with intense grooves are guaranteed to get you off the couch.

Sarah Bernstein – Veer Quartet
Sarah Bernstein; Sana Nagano; Leonor Falcon; Nick Jozwiak
New Focus Recordings Pan 26
(newfocusrecordings.com)

- Sarah Bernstein is a violinist and composer exploring the boundaries of genres, mixing elements of jazz, the avant-garde, electronic and improvisation. On this album, she explores the more traditional sounds of a string quartet but not with a result that is at all traditional. Her six compositions range from the hectic and angular News Cycle Progression to the more lyrical Clay Myth with its broad, elegiac head, to Hidden where she flirts with minimalist arpeggiation and an unpredictable ending.

My favourite track is the first one, Frames No.1: clear jazz references with a walking bass in the cello, solid grooves, and a simple form that gives soloing time to each of the four players. The string playing throughout is excellent though particular improv kudos go to Bernstein and cellist Nick Jozwiak who throws some surprisingly dense material into his solos. Bernstein often has the group accompany the solos with pizzicato: a nice device that sounds great.

Four string players of this quality have to be classically trained so you won’t hear the sort of language you might expect from jazzers. What you do hear is a group of excellent musicians searching for something new. Bravo to that.

Fraser Jackson

Andy Akiho – Oculus
Various Artists
Aki Rhythm Productions ARP-R008 (akiy rhythmproductions.bandcamp.com/album/oculus-2)

- Andy Akiho is a rising star on the American new music scene. He’s a virtuoso player of steel pan drums, who, as a composer, has been nominated for big prizes like the Pulitzer and Grammy Awards. One can hear why: good ideas abound, and no section overstays its welcome. Akiho uses grooves not as a gimmick but as a way to drive you from one intriguing idea to another.

Much of this tree-themed disc is taken up with his five-part Lignéous Suite for string quartet and marimba, played brilliantly by the Dover Quartet with Ian Rosenbaum. Akiho finds all kinds of ways to vary the marimba’s timbre, using bundles of sticks, wooden mallets, even an elastic band. The strings, too, are given effects like crunches, snaps, body knocks and glissandi, but even without all this colour the compositions are compelling: caffeinated, driving grooves, unpredictable codas, dark and brooding slow movements.

Also included on the disc are the speaking Tree for string quintet, brass quintet and percussion, and Deciduous for violin and steel pan. The former features wonderful ensemble playing with more of Akiho’s groove-oriented but complex writing, including a delightful section with toy piano. At just over 15 minutes, Deciduous is the longest work on the disc and gives ample scope to Akiho’s spectacular pan playing, paired with Kristin Lee’s equally masterful violin performance in a duet filled with surprising colour and dash.

The disc cover includes textural and evocative artwork by American photographer Stuart Rome.
enfolding
String Orchestra of Brooklyn
New Focus Recordings FCR331
(thesob.org)

> True to its title, the music on this album creates an encompassing sonic space for the listener, encouraging inwardness and introspection. SOB’s innovative new release features two composers that dive into the exploration of sound in its pure form and experiment with extended string techniques and grained, undiluted textures. Both compositions are premiere recordings and both are bearing with originality. The orchestra never gets in the way of the music but rather supports it with subtle interpretative choices.

Outside Only Sound by Scott Wollschlegler was commissioned by SOB at the time when concerts in outside spaces were becoming a new normal due to the pandemic restrictions. Recorded live at Fort Greene Park in Brooklyn, this piece cleverly juxtaposes outside spaces and internal experiences. The immediate sounds of everyday life, such as voices, footsteps, traffic and wind are an organic part of the composition; and strings mix, match, colour and interact with them. The changes in volume and spatiality add richness to the listening experience.

with eyes the colour of time, composed by Anne Leilehua Lanzilotti, was a Pulitzer Prize finalist in 2022. Made of movements and interludes, with poetic titles referring to works of art in the Contemporary Museum in Honolulu at the time of its opening in 1980, it presents a flowing, ever-changing sound that is visceral and elemental. The most delightful manipulation of sonic density by Lanzilotti incorporates a peaceful motif in the strings among explorations of raw textures. The last movement on the album, enfolding, leaves the listener in a harmonious state of contemplation.

Ivana Popovic

Guy Sacre – Oeuvres pour piano
Billy Eidi
Le Palais des Dégustateurs PDD 028
(lepalaisdesdegustateurs.com)

> There is, perhaps, no better way to become familiar with an individual composer’s ideas and performance practice than to hear them (or someone close to them) perform their works. Consider, for example, Olivier Messiaen’s recordings of his own organ music, or Yvonne Loriod-Messiaen performing her husband’s piano compositions, and how these aural experiences can augment – and sometimes overcome – the murky clarity present in printed music.

Such is the case with Billy Eidi’s interpretation of Guy Sacre’s piano works. Eidi and Sacre (b.1948) worked together in the 1990s to create the association Contrechamps, intended to rediscover unknown French repertoire. Equal parts scholar and composer, Sacre’s greatest contribution to musicology is perhaps La Musique de Piano, a critical census of a large part of the piano repertoire, dealing with 4,000 works by 272 composers.

Given his broad knowledge of piano repertoire, especially from French composers, it is no surprise that Sacre’s own compositions contain a wide range of influences and techniques. Many of his works utilize classical forms and structures over which are draped the harmonies and melodies of the early 20th century, inspired by Fauré, Debussy and Milhaud. This is, at its core, beautiful music and it traverses a range of affects and depth of expression without ever losing its levity, which is a remarkable compositional achievement.

While Sacre certainly writes stunning material, it is up to the interpreter to make it so, and Eidi brings a lightness of touch that, even in the most solemn and profound moments, provides much-needed clarity and transparency. This disc is a magnificent example of how an ideal combination of performer and composer can produce music of transcendent and sublime beauty.

Matthew Whitfield

Max Christie

The whole note.com
November 1 - December 13, 2022
Rounding out the disc, Aaron Jay Myers’ Strawimus and Richard Belcastro’s Nepetalactone take up the Zappa-ista torch. The latter title is the psychoactive ingredient in catnip. Fun stuff, well played.

Max Christie

Shawn Crouch – Chaos Theory
Various Artists
Acis APL56620 (acisproductions.com)

> Hats off to Shawn Crouch. The tracks on his recent release, Chaos Theory, enchant the ear and engage the mind. Liner notes sometimes muddy the waters, but these (apparently written by Crouch himself) are brief and informative. He’s fond of circles, canons, variations, and games and puzzles too.

> Get right to listening, and give it a twice-over before coming to any conclusions. There are brilliant performances on each track, and there’s a bit of everything in the variety. My favourite is probably the easiest to get inside of: 95 South, a woodwind trio that covers the U.S. Eastern Seaboard in three large leaps. Lake Road; Dublin, NH recalls the scene of a music festival he attended in his youth. 74th and Third; New York, NY must mean he lived in Manhattan for some of his early adulthood. It varies from frenetic to meditative. Bay Drive; Miami Beach, FL is the finale of the piece and the place where parenthood overtakes other concerns. Dedicated to his son, it stands in sharp and welcome contrast to the more angular writing elsewhere.

> Not that there’s any problem with the buzzing zigzags of the other pieces on the disc. A lengthy and cerebrally conceived solo sonata for cello is convincingly rendered by Craig Hultgren. A pictogram in the liner notes, probably Crouch’s own work, helps explain the tonic gravitational energy that propels Orbital Variations. This one needs more time to tell its story. I look forward to hearing it again.

> It’s so good to hear music that explores new sonor worlds while remaining idiomatic, such that the instrumentalist makes use of their strongest technical ability bringing the work to life. Crouch is old school in that regard, proving that solid compositional technique still makes for the most listenable avant-garde music.

Max Christie

Ivanovs – Symphonies Nos. 17 & 18
Latvian National Symphony Orchestra; Guntis Kuzma
LMIC SKANI 141 (skani.lv)

> In the March-April 2022 WholeNote, I described Janis Ivanovs’ Symphonies Nos.15 and 16 as “filled with dark sonorities, propulsive energy and clamorous dissonances,” qualities that reappeared, though less explosively, in his next two symphonies.

> The Moderato, Allegro of Ivanovs’ 32-minute Symphony No.17 in C Major (1976) begins slowly, with sombre, portentous music leading to tormented struggle and anguished outbursts, in their wake a haunting, “surviving” solo clarinet. The Allegro turns mysterious, its hollow, black-and-gold sonorities recalling Sibelius’ emblematic Fourth. The Adagio suggests, to me, an intense heavy church service, building to a hymn-like climax, followed by a muted recessional. The closing Allegro moderato seems to be marching off to yet another battle, but this time Ivanovs eschewed further violence, the symphony ending in peaceful serenity.

> The 35-minute Symphony No.18 in E Minor (1977) opens with the Moderato. Tranquillo referencing the first bars of Rachmaninoff’s Symphony No.2, also in E Minor. Unsurprisingly, the Tranquillo is soon negated by sinister turbulence, foreboding reinforced in the restless Allegro. Ivanovs, when interviewed about this work, referred to “the young men” who fought in World War II. An extended elegy for those “young men,” Andante. Tenebroso, moves from gloom to nobility, pride and reverence. The martial anthems of the Allegro moderato end the symphony in a burst of patriotic fervour.

> Conductor Guntis Kuzma and the Latvian National Symphony Orchestra brilliantly convey the dramatic and emotional extremes of their countryman’s extremely dramatic, emotion-laden music.

Michael Schulman

MoonStrike – Jennifer Higdon; Jerod Impichchaachaaha’ Tate; Pierre Ja...
TUM Records TUM BOX 005 (tumrecords.com)

> This CD presents three recent works for string quartet commissioned and enthusiastically performed by the Houston-based Apollo Chamber Players. Jennifer Higdon says she grew up “in the shadow of the Great Smoky Mountains,” the setting of her opera Cold Mountain. Music from the opera appears in her 16-minute In the Shadow of the Mountain (2020), both works reflecting, she writes, “the struggles of survival in Appalachia, the majesty of its natural features and the sonorities of the mountains’ music.” In affecting American-pastoral style, it evoked for me a day’s passage – uncertain dawn leading to resolute, animated engagement with the day’s demands, midday rest and reflection, resumption of busily rhythmic work, ending serenely with the coming of night and sleep.

> Chickasaw composer Jerod Impichchaachaaha’ Tate’s 18-minute MoonStrike (2019) commemorates the 50th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moon landing. Chickasaw astronaut John Herrington engagingly narrates three Indigenous myths about the moon; combined with picture-painting music drawing from traditional songs, this is a winning contribution to the children’s concert repertoire.

Michael Schulman

Wadada Leo Smith – String Quartets 1-12
RedKoral Quartet
TUM Records TUM BOX 005 (tumrecords.com)

> The composer and trumpeter Wadada Leo Smith is – together with Anthony Braxton, Muhal Richard Abrams, George Lewis, Roscoe Mitchell and others of the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM) – a composer in the revolutionary vein of Igor Stravinsky. He (Smith) is one of the mighty propellers of the musical continuum. So what does that have to with this critique?

> Let’s pretend we are watching an excerpt from Wolf Koenig’s 1965 documentary and we are now at the part where Koenig asks Stravinsky: “Who created music?” Restless with excitement Stravinsky, says: “God did.” Then he adds: “I think … Even not think… I am sure… with the creation there was just a BIG sound of drum and cymbals… and that the creation of music.” Spinning on that vibrant, rhythmic axis of creation is the continuum of music,
I believe that somewhere in their hearts, more than anywhere else, Wadada Leo Smith appears to have somehow been privy to that exact moment of Creation. This is why his music has its origins in the Ankh (the Egyptian symbol of Life), the root of Smith’s conception – his Ankhramation. It is out of this singular taproot that Smith’s music swirls in an elegant ellipsis, in the musical continuum.

Indeed Smith’s music seems to say that the tradition (that propels this continuum) is a wonderful reality, but not understanding that the inner dynamic of tradition is always to innovate, is a prison. Since his first acknowledged works on TUM Records, A Love Sonnet for Billie Holiday, The Chicago Symphonies, and, now the epic collection – his String Quartets Nos.1-12 in this lavishly produced (even by TUM standards) set, Smith has once again chiselled his uniquely beautiful, but defiantly provocative, body of work from out of the bedrock of what square-eyed distributors like to call the Jazz and the European Classical traditions.

But while that might imply a pastiche of archetypal Black American-and-Western European models, such as symphonies, sonnets and string quartets, instead even while using the European terminology almost sardonically, (on The Chicago Symphonies) and certainly on these string quartets, Smith forces his listeners to reconsider what tradition really is.

In String Quartets Nos.1-12, Smith positions himself in creative conflict with age-old protocols about how string quartets “ought” to work. By actively throwing overboard melodic, structural and harmonic hooks that have been expressively blunted through overuse, he builds from what might – or might not – be left. Smith, as both composer and performer, shows himself to be instinctively radical. The irresistible force of his work pulls in its wake with the RedKoral Quartet, harpist Alison Björkedal (String Quartet No.4), fellow Pulitzer Prize-winning pianist Anthony Davis (String Quartet No.6), percussionist Lynn Varian (String Quartet No.6), guitarist Stuart Fox (String Quartet No.7) and Thomas Buckner (voice on String Quartet No.8).

Together, the performers find themselves puréeing classical music’s sublime melodic and harmonic gestures into motor rhythms, volatile white noise and the most compelling absurdist theatrics as they wrench their instruments apart and journey through the musical debris. The music elevates the spirit of famous black men (Ulysses SimpsonKay, Thomas Jefferson Anderson, Jr., Hale Smith and George Theophilus Walker in String Quartet No.1, Haki R. Madhubuti in String Quartet No.5, Indigenous Peruvian heroes in String Quartet No. 7, Ma Rainey and Marion Anderson in String Quartet No.9, Louis Armstrong in String Quartet No.11… and so on.

In this music, definitions of beauty – Smith’s Black American definitions of beauty – are central to his artistic credo in these iconic works. But the composer – with Ankhramation gestures of thought and musical action – argues that his music and the artists performing it must make the distinction between overly perfumed, audience- ingratiating beauty typical of commercial music – which he regards as disturbingly manipulative – and “authentic” beauty, as naturally evocative as God, the Master Creator intended it to be.

This landmark 7-CD release marks the conclusion of a celebration of the 80th anniversary of Wadada Leo Smith’s birth. The collection lands smack dab onto the earth’s musical map as a proverbial masterpiece of modernist music. Smith shepherds the crack musicians of the RedKoral Quartet and celebrated guests through an epic sojourn of his uncompromising soundworld. If the sounds that Smith hears in his inner ear move off the radar of conventional instrumental timbre, the RedKoral, who have worked extensively with him over the past decade, and other musicians unerringly zone into his musical intentions, realizing his ideals to perfection.

There are numerous rewards in store for anyone who delights in following lines of pure musical thought as evinced by the wondrous repertoire proffered by Cheung. Nothing is gratuitous or extraneous, nor can the musical character ever be taken for granted. This is true when you plunge deeply into the song All Roads. Cheung creates the apotheosis of the album right out of the gates as he inhabits (sort of) Billy Strayhorn’s melancholy and the thinly disguised autobiographical character from Lush Life. Cheung’s anti-hero also staggers elegantly along a similar road which Strayhorn’s protagonist once took as he moped his way home. Pianist Gilles Vonsattel traces the wobbly route home with elliptical, arpeggiated Ellingtonian runs as a sky-dome darkens with the strings of the Escher Quartet.

To read, or not to read (the booklet notes to a recording) before listening to its music; that is usually the first question that pops into a critic’s head. Apologies need be made, I suppose, to Shakespeare whose beauteous iambic pentameter has been unabashedly appropriated by composer Anthony Cheung for All Roads, an album of rather extraordinary program music.

To my eyes, Marina Hasselberg is a likeable, versatile, adaptable and free improviser like Peggy Lee and Okkyung Lee and gig work with Mariah Carey. Red is her full-length debut, presenting some essential facets of her musical personality, both as soloist and in improvisatory groups.

Red opens with an immediate declaration of independence, Hasselberg spanning centuries as she performs Gabriello’s Ricercar Primo accompanied by improvising electronic musician Giorgio Magnanensi; they then follow that with S6, a free improvisation. Where the Sand Is Hot will suggest a similarly broad time span. Guitarist Araj Bajakian and drummer Kenton Loewen join in a modal improvisation with Hasselberg plucking intense, shifting, rhythmic patterns that suggest the guembri, a bass lute played for centuries by the Gnawa people of Morocco.

That sometimes playful ability to span genre and time is no deterrent to Hasselberg’s focus. That’s evident in the disc’s most concentrated moment: composer Linda Catlin Smith’s Ricercar, which develops the tone and intensity evident in the earlier Gabriello in a sustained work. There’s further evidence of the emotional depth of Hasselberg’s playing in the concluding Things Full Apart, Craig Aalders’ composition for cello and tape. Along the way, Hasselberg finds further opportunities to improvise with Magnanensi, Bajakian, Loewen and violinist Jesse Zabot, in this vivid introduction to a musician as skillful as she is adventurous.

Stuart Broomer
Aspire – Jofre; Piazzolla; Villa-Lobos
Seunghee Lee; JP Jofre; London Symphony Orchestra; Enrico Fagone
Musica Solis MS202208 (musicasolis.com)

► Clarinetist Seunghee Lee and Argentinian bandoneon/composer/arranger JP Jofre met in New York City where Lee first heard Jofre’s compositions. She was very “intrigued” by the bandoneon which totally makes sense as both their instruments share similar reed sound production. Lee requested something for clarinet and bandoneon. Their resulting collaboration is heard here in eight compositions and arrangements on Lee’s independent label.

Jofre has a perfect, respectful vision of Argentinian music including that for the tango. His Lee commissioned clarinet/orchestra arrangement of Piazzolla’s Tango Étude No.3 is spectacular, remaining true to the Piazzolla sound with lush florid virtuoso clarinet lines and contrasting rhythmic orchestral sounds, performed by the London Symphony Orchestra under Enrico Fagone. Lee’s clarinet (instead of voice) and eight cello arrangement of Villa-Lobos’ Bachianas Brasileiras No.5 Aria (Cantillena) is slower, with colourful low/high pitch contrasts and tight doubled instrumental lines.

Six Jofre originals are featured. The upbeat Primavera has clear virtuosic interchanges between clarinet, bandoneon and orchestra. The three-movement Lee-commission Double Concerto for Clarinet, Bandoneon and Orchestra draws from tango, popular and classical music. I. Vals Irreal has short gloomy to energetic clarinet and bandoneon solo/duet ideas above the orchestra. Dramatic exciting III. AboriginaL combines rhythmic instrumental fun to its closing percussive blast. Perfect blending of moving lines and held notes in two clarinet/bandoneon duets, Como el Agua and Svet Dreams. More tango neoclassical sounds in Tongdromo, and the mood-changing Taranguiño, each for clarinet, bandoneon and piano (Steven Beck).

A must-beheard exploration of styles passionately composed and performed.

Nick Storring – Music from Wéi 成
Nick Storring
Orange Milk Records (orangemilkrecords.bandcamp.com)

► Toronto-based Canadian composer/musician Nick Storring was commissioned by his frequent Toronto collaborator/choreographer Yvonne Ng (of tiger princess dance projects) to compose music for her five-dancer piece Wéi 成. Starting in a December 2017 Banff Centre residency, and completed in 2021, Storring takes a single instrument – the piano – and composes, performs and records layered multi-tracks on grand and upright pianos and a Yamaha computer-controlled acoustic Disklavier piano to create sounds ranging from traditional to prepared piano to full orchestral soundscapes and silences.

A short Wéi 成 YouTube clip with dancers reaffirms Storring’s detailed understanding of creating dance music. It is equally fantastic as listening music. The opening I introduces the listener to Storring’s multi-faceted music. A contemplative held-note gradual crescendo from silence opens. A piano single line widely spaced lyrical melody follows, then gradual introduction of tonal to atonal chords. A fadeout section is followed by a crescendo of repeated notes, effects, loud rumbling sounds like a dramatic full orchestra then back to more quiet atonal electronic keyboard effects, to closing wobbling held notes fading directly to the next track. Other sections build on these, including subtle tastes of jazz, rock, folk, notes, romantic and contemporary sounds in III. full orchestral sound with wide-pitched electronic effects in V; and funky musical ideas from drum-like rocking cymbal crashes and guitar-like grooves to the closing quiet ending in VI.

Storring’s experimental compositions and performances, ranging from ambient calm to shorter tense qualities, are inspirational.

Parisa Sabet – A Cup of Sins
Various Artists
Redshift Records TK478 (redshiftrecords.org)

► Iranian-Canadian composer Parisa Sabet’s six compositions here draw on Iranian traditional music and Western music like minimalism, atonalism and romanticism, perfectly performed by Jacqueline Woodley (soprano), Christina Petrowska Quilico (piano), Laurel Swinden (flute), Peter Stoll (clarinet), Robert Grieve (electric guitar), Matthias McIntire (violin/viola), Dobrochna Zubek (cello), Robert Grieve (electric guitar) and Joshua Tamayo (conductor).

Highlights include the upbeat chamber piece Shurangiz, a well-orchestrated Western/Iranian influenced composition with rhythmic repetitive grooves, lush clarinet and flute lines, and colourful repeated piano notes, inspired by contemporary Iranian Tar player/composer Ali Ghamarsi. Woodley and Petrowska Quilico perform the three-movement Dance in your Blood, a setting of an English translation of a Farsi poem by Rumi. It combines classical art song like the Movement I opening piano solo and gentle vocals, and wild free expression Movement II with modern vocal effects like the repeated word “love,” and atonal piano chords. Violin solo Geyrani, inspired by Iranian kamancheh virtuoso/composer Kayhan Kalhor, has colourful held notes, alternating high/low pitched lines and high squeaky notes. McIntire’s amazing performance sounds like more than one violinist playing!

Set to a text about sexual violence and trauma by poet Simin Behbahani, A Cup of Sin is for soprano, clarinet, viola, piano, electric guitar and cello. The opening contemplative prelude with long held drone and spoken text leads to the longer “not-so-easy listening” dramatic middle movement encompassing sudden surprising loud crashes, vocal squeals and spoken words, concluding with a calm postlude.

Sabet successfully incorporates her life experiences in these unique compositions.

Fire in the West
Neil Swainson
Cellar Music CM111821 (cellarlive.com)

► Canadian bassist extraordinaire and composer Neil Swainson’s newest release is a jazz aficionado’s dream. Blazing trumpet and saxophone melodies, catchy rhythms and energetic yet mellow bass riffs come together to form a stellar, oh-so-pleasing-to-the-ear record. It may be a surprise to some, but this is the first time in his 35-year-long career that Swainson is leading a quintet… but what a fantastic job he does yet again as a bandleader. Featuring famed musicians on the roster, such as Renee Rosnes on piano, Lewis Nash on drums, Brad Turner on trumpet and Kelly Jefferson on tenor sax, this record sees a set of fiery tunes lifted to new heights via a scintillating backing band. The album is chock-full of Swainson’s original works, serving as a great example of not only his musical talents but also his compositional prowess.

The talented bassist says of the formation of the record: “In the process of preparing for that re-release [45th Parallel], I thought that it was time to do something in a similar vein, using the same format on some current tunes I’d written.” “Current” being the keyword there, in the way that Swainson does a truly great job of bringing the traditional jazz sound into the contemporary musical world, modernizing melodies and rhythms while maintaining a perfect balance with a hark back to the past. A great addition to any jazz-lover’s collection.

JAZZ AND IMPROVISED

Tiina Kilik

Kati Killaspea
Small Bridges
Robert Diack; Patrick O’Reilly; Jacob Thompson; Brandon Davis
Independent (robertdiack.com)

Toronto-based drummer, composer and producer Robert Diack has released a scintillating sophomore album, taking the listener on a meandering journey through genres. The record is finely tuned throughout, a true audophile’s dream; a sonic landscape emerges right in front of the listener and instantly transports them to another musical dimension. All pieces are penned by Diack himself along with occasional co-writers from amongst the band, truly showcasing the young drummer’s compositional talents as well as unique conceptualizations reflected within his music. The cream of the crop of famed young Canadian musicians have been gathered together for this album: Patrick O’Reilly on guitar; Iacob Thompson on piano; and Brandon Davis on bass. A perfect companion to the picturesque scenes and landscapes of autumn, this is a great addition to the explorative jazz-lover’s collection.

The album draws upon influences from several genres, including both contemporary and traditional jazz, post-rock, fusion and country; blending them together and transitioning between them seamlessly. The result is a poignant hodgepodge, evoking a mix of emotions and images in the mind’s eye within every track. Diack himself has said that with this set of tracks, he “wanted to explore a broader swath of genre and texture” and delve into a diverse musical landscape, which he does brilliantly. Beautiful, captivating melodies layered over complex rhythms make for a must-have for the jazz aficionado who wants a true sonic experience.

Hey There
Jeremy Wong; Ardeshir Pourkeramati; Chris Gestrin; John Lee; Jesse Cahill; Alvin Brendan
Cellar Music CM100321 (cellarlive.com)

The opener is Rodgers and Hart’s classic A lovely guitar/vocal intro followed by bold, chordal configurations and ultimately a swinging and joyous romp that then descends into chaos. Lombre’s exceptional piano work here is both skillful and breathtaking. Other highlights include Self Portrait in 3 Colors – a reflection of Mingus’ feelings about mental health, replete with a gorgeous solo from Johnson; Meditations for a Pair of Wirecutters – a flag waver for Mingus’ noted mid-1960s sextet (the band that propelled Phillon into this project), and the final track, Better Git It In Your Soul, which is a superb interpretation of Mingus’ funky, soulful anthem, rendered here with all of the swing and heart possible. Mingus would be proud.

Anne Walsh
A to Zinc Music (annewalsh.com)

The Astrud Project
Anne Walsh
Independent (a-to-zinc.com)

Only a Dream, a charming original waltz that deftly dances us through the sadness of a lost love, features a fine bass solo from Lee. Other delights include a line arrangement of Frank Loesser’s Never Will I Marry, which clearly displays Wong’s ability to swing and scat. A total standout is the rarely performed gem from Fran Landesman and Tommy Wolf, Spring Can Really Hang You Up the Most. Wong’s maturity as a vocalist is clear here, as he imbues meaning into every word, and effortlessly sails through the rather gymnastic melodic line. A fine debut from a highly talented emerging jazz vocalist!

Lesley Mitchell-Clarke

Lesley Mitchell-Clarke
Dedicated to You
Joe Coughlin; Bernie Senensky; Neil Swainson; Terry Clarke; Ryan Oliver
Cellar Music CM120121 (cellarlive.com)

Before you even play this recording – Dedicated to You by Joe Coughlin – you will find that the repertoire is wonderfully chosen, and just the right length so as not to be “too much of a good thing.” When you do play the recording you will discover the best thing about it: the voice of Joe Coughlin, sounding like the rustle of raw silk.

Coughlin’s admiration for Johnny Hartman – who created benchmark interpretations of these charts – is sometimes palpable. But these charts also speak in a very personal way of Coughlin. Surprises come by way of his applying raspy glissandos to words in a phrase here and there, and poignant dallying with the word “love” in a beautifully sculpted line. Listen, with the heart, to On Green Dolphin Street, It Could Happen to You and My One and Only Love.

When lyrics speak to a vocalist in the secret of the heart that the song emerges can come with an evanescent magic. Coughlin pulls off quite a few of these moments on this album. The first is Lush Life. Billy Strayhorn’s most intimate presciently autobiographical composition. Coughlin makes every utterance a poetic one, shaping the character of the song with so much pathos that it is almost too painfully beautiful. And then there’s My Ship and Nature Boy...

All of this music is made immeasurably better by Coughlin’s accompanists, pianist Bernie Senensky, bassist Neil Swainson, drummer Terry Clarke and saxophonist Ryan Oliver.

Coughlin has an eclectic profile, ranging from playing electric bass in the experimental rock band Mr. Bungle to composing and recording a set of chamber music pieces, Nocturnes, in 2019. He first formed Trio–Convulsant in the mid-1990s, then reformed it briefly in 2004 with then unknown, now celebrated, guitarist Mary Halvorson and drummer Ches Smith, both present for this 2022 reunion.

Quatre fleshes out Dunn’s complex compositions and adds additional improvising heft, with violinist Carla Khilstedt, clarinetist Oscar Noriega, cellist Mariel Roberts and flutist Anna Webber.

The compositions are challenging in both their subject matter and musical complexity. Dunn draws inspiration from a bizarre and banned 18th-century French religious cult called Les Convulsionnaires de Saint-Médard, matching the chaos of their sado-erotic hysterical practices with compound time signatures (15/4, 9/4) and overlays of different tempos and keys. In the CD’s opening moments, Webber’s piping, elusive flute is joined by abstracted strings; others gradually enter and then Dunn and Smith suddenly introduce a pounding rhythmic pattern, shifting from Debussy to Megadeth in a minute. The later Eschatology, in contrast, is a subtle string-weave of Halvorson, Kihlstedt and Roberts in which disparate rhythms and tonalities achieve a continuous flow.

What makes it successful is Dunn’s intense musicality. His sudden contrasts arise organically from his subject matter, and his musicians, masters of both execution and improvisation, celebrate the challenge and the interaction.

Emigre Canadian pianist Kris Davis’ Pyroclastic label is developing a remarkable record for releasing music that’s both conceptually imaginative and brilliantly realized. This one is no exception.

Universal Tonality
William Parker
Centricity Records CENT 1030
(williamparker.bandcamp.com)

Bassist and composer William Parker has long been a major figure in New York City, leading ensembles from small to large and making free jazz an activist instrument of community. Universal Tonality, heard here in a 2002 performance from New York’s Roulette, is a major composition: its six movements run to 110 minutes and merge orchestra, soloists and song. Singer Leena Conquest, a frequent collaborator, brings warmth and immediacy to Parker’s words and melodies, reminiscent of the rich contribution of Abbey Lincoln to Max Roach’s music or June Tyson’s to Sun Ra’s, while a 16-member band articulates the shifting sonic materials and developing layers of Parker’s conception, often merging composed and improvised elements in seamless ways in a graphic score.

Parker has an expansive vision of a global sound palette that can be glimpsed in just the instruments involved. Here he includes strings (komungo, koto, dilruba, donso’ngoni), percussion (balafon) and winds (shakuhachi and chiramia) from multiple Asian, African and South American sources as well as violins, various brass and reeds and percussion. It’s also a band of distinct instrumental voices, including trombonists Grachan Moncur III and Steve Swell, violinists Billy Bang and Jason Kao Hwang, saxophonists Rob Brown and Daniel Carter, and guitarist Joe Morris, all fitting their individual strengths into Parker’s larger schematic patterns and poetry.

Universal Tonality is constructed on a grand scale, but there’s nothing particularly daunting about it; its constantly shifting and evolving textures, voices and moods are generally fresh, inviting and accessible.

Stuart Broome

Walls Made of Glass
Gentiane MG
Three Pines Records TPR-009 (gentianemg.com)

Gentiane Michaud-Gagnon (known as Gentiane MG) is a pianist and composer who has released her third album, Walls Made of Glass, with Levi Dover on bass and Louis-Vincent Hamel on drums. Walls Made of Glass is also this group’s third album together and their intimate communication adds subtlety and nuance to every track.

MG’s influences are classical composers such as Debussy and Chopin and jazz masters like Keith Jarrett and Chick Corea. The Moon, the Sun, the Truth opens with a minor repeating pattern on piano which moves into a more strident chordal section supported by drums and bass. In this, and other compositions, MG moves between written and improvised sections and it is sometimes difficult to separate the two. This strategy gives her jazz pieces a more classical structure where freer sections alternate with repeated themes. Flowers Laugh Without Uttering a Sound has a swirling solo piano intro, then the bass and drums enter to nail down a solid backbeat, the solo piano repeats, then the jazz beat and angular piano chords give way to a more traditional piano solo. Eventually the piece builds into an intense drum solo before the swirling chords come back to fade into the distance.

Walls Made of Glass is highly original music and deserves our thoughtful listening.

Ted Parkinson
Rich in Symbols II – The Group of Seven, Tom Thomson & Emily Carr
Chet Doxas
Justin Time JTR8362-2 (justin-time.com)

▸ Chet Doxas is a composer and saxophone player born in Montreal and currently living in Brooklyn. His 2017 album called Rich in Symbols was dedicated to New York’s Lower East Side art movement of the 1980s. With this current album, Rich in Symbols II, Doxas has composed musical interpretations of seven Canadian paintings from the Group of Seven, Tom Thomson and Emily Carr. Doxas spent a great deal of time with each painting and took music manuscript paper and a notepad to record his thoughts. Rich in Symbols II has elements of jazz and improvised music supported with environmental “field recordings,” Joe Grass’ pedal steel guitar and banjo, Jacob Sacks’ piano and mellotron. Each piece sounds like a sonic journey reminiscent of Pictures at an Exhibition (we also hear footsteps and other environmental sounds throughout). Doxas’ melodies are both whimsical and beautiful and lead to sparse, frenetic improvisations. For example The Jack Pine begins with a faint tinkling piano, some minimalist guitar and a saxophone which sounds like it is being played through a staticky radio that is down the hall in another room. The piece becomes quite gorgeous when we hear the full sax sound after the three-minute mark.

Rich in Symbols II is an intriguing and highly original album with many subtle colours throughout.

Ted Parkinson

Cha-Ran
Robert Lee
Independent (robertleebass.com)

▸ Even before reading the notes, it is clear that Robert Lee is a storyteller. Every composition has a clear arc to it. The energy rises and falls, paced with patience and purpose as if choreographed. Structurally, the music possesses an enthralling contour that twists and detours, evoking major plot points. Metric modulation is consistently used in this sense, as a means of strongly distinguishing sections and establishing new scenery. Additionally, adding further intrigue, there are indelible moments of great specificity to be found in every track. One such example is the sudden clapping break in the middle of Peaks and Spires of the Summer Clouds, bridging the first two verses with a moment of ingenuity while simultaneously introducing a new layer to the rhythmic feel of the arrangement. Elsewhere you have the tranquil epilogue of Seun-Sul, where seemingly any other bandleader in existence would have opted for a fadeout ending after the blazing guitar climax.

Lee’s writing process on this album pulls from the narrative styles of folk-tales and Studio Ghibli films, managing to do so without feeling derivative for a single second. Along with form, dialogue also plays a central role in the music. Lee’s bass tone is perpetually tuned into Tetyana Haraschuk’s ride cymbal, creating a textural foundation that simmers and makes for natural transitions between pieces. The fullness of Carolina Alabat’s voice as a constant factor creates space for subtextual counterpoint in the rhythm section.

Yoshi Maclear Wall

Journey to the Present
Sheila Soares
Independent (sheilasoaresmusic.com)

▸ On this fittingly titled album, Sheila Soares reaches back, drawing from her influences to create an exhilarating blend of nostalgic and contemporary jazz. The album’s vision is immediately evident from the opening line, “we will drive in no direction but away from what we know,” fore-shadowing the stylistic explorations that ensue. The title track itself is a microcosm of this concept, for while it’s not anything that overtly challenges the conventions of improvised music, it balances this familiarity with overblowing honks, shrill screams and intense split tones.

Balance is key. So if Fleming’s string shakes introduce unneeded harsh speediness, lyrical vibraphone shading swiftly moves the exposition back on track. Similarly, a cornucopia of altissimo cries and airy multiphonics from the reeds are sometimes meshed with distinct bass thumps. At the top of Tragic Leisure, for example, wistful woodwind harmonies are intensified with melodic string glissandi. As tough bass strokes quicken the pace, percussion smacks and guitar reverb quickly join in, only to have buoyant clarinet trills float the narrative back to reflect its Arcadian introduction.

Fournier’s concluding Saltlick City expresses its astrangency with raspy saxophone bites and jagged arco swipes. But the contrapuntal buzzing timbres are combined with warm clarinet expressions that precede a crescendo of group vibrations that confirm the equitable direction of the piece and of the album itself.

In his tenth year as bandleader Fournier has undoubtedly attained a desired plateau.

Ken Waxman

Concert Note: NUMUS presents Trio at the Jazz Room in Waterloo, November 13.
Gravity Without Airs
Kirk Knuffke Trio
TAO Forms 10 (aumfidelity.com/collections/tao-forms)

Tracks like Birds of Passage honky-tonk effects animate other tunes. Rhythmic keyboard chording dipping into progress in the same way that walking string power are part of some tracks’ textural control is always evident. Staccato to a unified and unique ending, three-part and shakes blow and bounce the program is resolved with a potent groove, until the introductory bass string pops and measured chording of that improvisational gravity can confirm the ongoing horizontal flow.

New Yorkers Knuffke, bassist Michael Bisio and pianist Matthew Shipp bridge the drumless gap by concentrating rhythmic power in the pianist’s pedal-point pressure, plus the bassist’s subtle core resonations. This gives the cornetist space to free flow techniques ranging from triplet slides heading to screech mode, descriptive grace notes or half-valve smears. Used judiciously, the motifs lock in with the rhythm section’s expression to create 14 tunes that don’t swing conventionally, but are presented with both dexterity and dynamics.

From the brassy portamento expositions, bass string pops and measured chording of the introductory Gravity Without Airs that is resolved with a potent groove, until the concluding Today for Today, where slurs and shakes blow and bounce the program to a unified and unique ending, three-part textural control is always evident. Staccato bugling, rolling keyboard forces and arco string power are part of some tracks’ progress in the same way that walking bass strokes, brash open horn flutters and rhythmic keyboard chording dipping into honky-tonk effects animate other tunes. Tracks like Birds of Passage appear as if aviary yips and evacuated inner-horn slurs are going to dominate, then paced piano single notes and modulated bowing confirm the ongoing horizontal flow. Without putting on airs, the trio establishes that improvisational gravity can be simultaneously intense and convivial.

Ken Waxman

POT POURRI

The Equation of Time
Charke-Cormier Duo with Celso Machado
Leaf Music LM260 (leaf-music.ca)

Featuring Derek Charke on flute and bass flute and Eugene Cormier on guitar, this CD takes its title from Charke’s composition The Equation of Time, which occupies the last four tracks and refers to the fact that it is composed of an equal number of fast and slow sections. Arguably, however, the CD might better have been called The Equations of Time, not only because of tempos, but also because the compositions found on it were written in four different centuries, and the two older compositions include contemporary additions and variations seamlessly incorporated by the composer-performers themselves. This in itself adds yet another temporal dimension, the composer-performer, a rarity in our day, but typical earlier in the life of western music.

Added to all this are percussionist Celso Machado’s contributions, six pieces of Brazilian dance music, adding a musical sensibility at least as remote from contemporary Canadian music making as the much older compositions on the disc by Frescobaldi (17th century) and Wilhelmine von Bayreuth (18th century). The result is a strange and intriguing series of juxtapositions of new and old, familiar and unfamiliar, expected and unexpected musical experiences, a sort of musical surrealism, evocative of the artistic ferment of the second and third decades of 20th-century Europe, but with a vitality coming from real artistic expression and not imitation. I should add as well that the performances are infused with an equal vitality and artistry.

Charke, Cormier and Machado have reinvented the CD as a work of art in itself, more than just a concert program frozen in time.

Allan Pulker

Day in the Sun
Mikkel Ploug
Songlines SGL1635-2 (songlines.com)

The Danish guitarist Mikkel Ploug recorded this collection of 14 pieces for solo acoustic guitar last December. I loved every track on this album: introspective, inventive, tasteful and positive. If you enjoy playlists like “Acoustic Guitar Chill” but wish the tracks were just a bit more intellectually satisfying, this album is for you. The style is, as Ploug himself says, genreless: it sits somewhere near the intersection of jazz, folk, minimalism and classical. In fact, one of the pieces is Ploug’s take on a nocturne by the contemporary Danish composer Bent Sørensen. The playing is nuanced and heartfelt and I’m happy to say the producers kept things real by not trying to cover up the sounds of finger slides and the occasional twang.

Most of the tracks are recorded on Ploug’s steel string guitar but on two of them he uses a flamenco guitar with gut strings: gorgeous. The title is fittingly: Mose Allison’s “Pompeii” and Wilhelmine von Bayreuth’s “Day in the Sun”.

El Violin Dorado, El Violin Arabe
Pablo Picco’s Bardo Todol
Full Spectrum Records (fullspectrumrecords.bandcamp.com)

Sound exploration is at the core of the ongoing Bardo Todol project by Argentinian composer and sound artist Pablo Picco. Bypassing linearity and... direction in favour of capturing what is heard in each moment. Picco creates a wonderful sense of immediacy that is not urgent but encompassing, and spontaneity that is raw and unfiltered.

El Violín Dorado, El Violín Arabe is the recent addition to this experimental series of ongoing recordings; it focuses on the subject and implementation of desert as a soundscape. Picco centers his compositions around field recordings, which he acquires on daily walks with his children. The simple instruments they play on the walks then become a part of the big organic sound and that sound is further manipulated digitally. Improvisation is an essential part of this process and adds to the unique expressiveness of the overall sound. Silence between the main blocks of sound then becomes a thread that connects them into the sonic story.

El Violín Dorado, El Violín Arabe (The Golden Violin, The Arab Violin) focuses on distorted violin, other string instruments, drums, Arabic devotional music and grainy vinyl textures. Both soundscapes have an element of bleakness and distortion. The sound morphs constantly, through a clever use of spatiality as well as through what is not heard. The noise is intercepted and transmitted throughout, allowing us to hear both concrete and imaginative projections of what the desert is. Inventive, immediate, this gem requires active listening.

Note: this release is a limited edition cassette or high quality digital download via select online retailers.

Ivana Popovic

La Voz Del Mar
Xiomara Torres
Patois Records PRCD028 (xiomaratortes.com)

The African Diaspora transported a variety of seminal musics and rhythmic forms to the Americas, which have also contributed heartily to North American blues and jazz. This luminous project (translated as The Voice of the Sea) honours the Afro-Colombian musical tradition, and was deftly produced by San Francisco-based vibraphonist Dan Neville and Colombian vocalist Xiomara Torres. All of the consummate arrangements were created by Neville, and the recording itself was done entirely in Cali, Colombia. In his profound collaboration with vocalist Torres, this CD stands as a living tribute to Torres' esteemed uncle, master marimbist and international “Music de Pacifica”/Afro-Colombian icon, maestro Diego Obregon.

Torres lovingly embraces her traditional roots here, while travelling seamlessly through a number of contemporary Latin motifs. First up is Me Quedo Contigo. Torres' timbre is soft and sensual here, and her vocals are also pitch perfect, vibrant and filled with emotional gravitas. Neville has insured that she is never overwhelmed by the potent and complex rumba Guaguancó arrangement, which is rife with horns, vibes/marimba and incendiary percussion.

Tarde Lo Conoci is a totally delightful Vallenato – a musical form that one could easily hear in the barrios of Cali, Colombia or Queens, NY – featuring accordionist Miguel Salazar, while Tio is a family affair, written by Diego Obregon and featuring his son David on bass and daughter Michél on chorus vocals. The lively tune begins as a curricular and segues seamlessly into a Colombian rumba. Irresistible stand-outs also include La Puerta, a romantic and ethereal bolero (ballad) and the spinetlingly closer – the traditional Filomena – a surprising jazz/Pacific Coast Music fusion featuring the iconic Nidia Góngora and may hermosa marimba work by Neville.

Lesley Mitchell-Clarke

Unánime
Roxana Amed
Sony Music Latin 19658748082 (roxana-amed.com)

This inspired, gorgeous, relevant project from multi-grammy nominee Roxana Amed is a joyous celebration of the works of both contemporary and historic Latin-American composers, as well as Miles Davis, Edward Perez and Martin Bejerano.

Amed views “Latin” as a very open concept, as well as the unifying geno connection that the title implies, and she has made this concept of unity the focus of a stirring and deeply magical recording. The Argentinian emigre has surrounded herself with some of the most exceptional Latin musicians on the planet, including her long-time collaborators, Cuban/ American pianist and arranger Bejerano, bassist Perez and drummer Ludwig Afonso.

First up is a re-envisioning of Miles Davis’ Flamenco Sketches in which Amed’s sultry and evocative tones wrap themselves around the listener in waves of warm, horn-like sonic joy. The emotionally moving arrangement manifests a sacred vibration and Niño Josele’s viscous soloing on acoustic guitar speaks to us at the very molecular level. Brazil’s legendary Egberto Gismonti is feted here with a potent version of his composition Agua y Vino. The dusky tones of Amed’s sumptuous voice weave a haunting web, while Chico Pinheiro’s guitar transports us to another realm. Of special note is Los Tres Golpes, a song from Cuban icon Ignacio Cervantes featuring the volcanic Chucho Valdés on piano. The deeply moving closer, Adios a Cuba, is another beloved Cervantes composition, rendered to perfection with the angelic collaboration of Amed and Valdés.

Lesley Mitchell-Clarke

NETSA
Minyeshu
mcps EUCD2945 (armcusico.co.uk)

│ The path stubbornly antithetical to globalism is often littered with civilizations that remain almost supernaturally mysterious. One such civilization and culture is the land of Ras-Tafari and, double entendre, an amusing example the latter ensconced in a sign at Addis Ababa airport that says: “Welcome to Ethiopia, Centre of Active Recreation and Relaxation.” A scrunch-browed bop, no matter how deep the furrows, provides no respite. Neither might the repertoire on Netsa by the eminent effervescent vocalist, Minyeshu Kifle Tedla.

The great Bill Laswell – in typically Homeric manner – first approached Ethiopia through what he famously described as “cultural collision”. It was Laswell who enabled us to peer – magically, through a glass darkly – into the ontological works of Hakim Bey, the Moroccan sojourns of Paul Bowles and Brion Gysin. Laswell’s cultural collisions also presented the ancient-future of the ineffably brilliant Ejigayehu Shibabaw – and with her mystical music the washint and the kitir (ancient Ethiopian flute and harp respectively), the latter of which was believed to be played by King David when he composed the Psalms.

Minyeshu, to her enormous credit, has brought the ancient-future of Ethiopian music – indeed Ethiopian culture – to a kind of wonderful artistic maturity. Her majestic vocal ululations propel, with irresistible kinetic energy, music redolent of colourful tone textures and transcendent rhythms to conjure a kind of musical magisterium formed – as it were – out of the vivid red clay of the land of Ras-Tafari. Maddening seduction is imminent.

Raul da Gama

La Voz Del Mar
Xiomara Torres
Patois Records PRCD028 (xiomaratortes.com)

The African Diaspora transported a variety of seminal musics and rhythmic forms to the Americas, which have also contributed heartily to North American blues and jazz. This luminous project (translated as The Voice of the Sea) honours the Afro-Colombian musical tradition, and was deftly produced by San Francisco-based vibraphonist Dan Neville and Colombian vocalist Xiomara Torres. All of the consummate arrangements were created by Neville, and the recording itself was done entirely in Cali, Colombia. In his profound collaboration with vocalist Torres, this CD stands as a living tribute to Torres’ esteemed uncle, master marimbist and international “Music de Pacifica”/Afro-Colombian icon, maestro Diego Obregon.

Torres lovingly embraces her traditional roots here, while travelling seamlessly through a number of contemporary Latin
Something in the Air
Reinventing the guitar trio in new configurations
KEN WAXMAN

When it comes to guitarists in jazz and improvised music the most common trio configuration seems to be guitar/bass/drums. Much exceptional music has come from groups like that, but recently more musicians are finding that stretching group parameters with one or two other instruments to balance guitar expression can create novel sounds. Most of these trio discs do just that.

That said, Slovenian guitarist Samo Šalamon, 43, still finds a way to make inspiring sounds with a conventional trio structure. He does that on Pure and Simple (Samo Records samosalamon.com) by going back to the future. His associates are two players whose pioneering playing helped create jazz-rock fusion in the 1960s: American drummer Ra Kalam Bob Moses, and Norwegian bassist Arild Andersen, a founding member of Ian Garbarek’s group. Moving into the 21st century with their chops intact, Moses, 74, and Andersen, 77, improvise with the mastery and subtlety that belies fusion’s reputation as a repository for accelerated showy solos. Moses, who vibrates, ratchets and hand pats percussion instruments as often as he lays down a beat, plays constantly throughout the CD, but his rhythmic sense is so ingenious that it’s a drum aura rather than a sound that’s often there. With his instantly identifiable string slides and tandem interaction with the guitarist, Andersen adds melody to the mixture. When the trio plays The Golden Light of Evening, its closest link to jazz-rock for instance, the bassist’s string slides vibrate in elastic counterpoint to rein in the guitarist’s buzzes and flanges from dominating the track. Meantime, the one time Moses smashes instead of strokes his drums is when playing Albert Ayler’s Ghosts. Yet it’s Šalamon’s slurred fingering that makes his strings soar like a saxophone and Andersen’s perfectly shaped solo that confirms the melodic lift as well as the strength of this free jazz anthem. Just as the three are too accomplished to display energy for its own sake, when it comes to folksy lyricism on tunes like Little Song, harmony among clarion-pitched guitar, mid-range bass strokes and percussion clunks is steely enough to avoid clouding smoothness. But perhaps the best instance of their cerebral interaction is on You Take My Arm. Operating on top of Moses’ hand drumming, Šalamon’s 12-string guitar clangs and the bassist’s gruff chording make the performance loose and languid. It still includes enough strength though so that the rhythmic string plinks and rim clangs hang in the air after the track is completed.

Alterning one part of the equation, Vancouver guitarist Gordon Grdina organizes his Nomad Trio with American drummer Jim Black, as well as extra chordal input from New York pianist Matt Mitchell to reach a Boiling Point (Astral Spirits AS 201 gordon-grdina.bandcamp.com). One of the ways this trio usually operates at 100 degrees Celsius is the vaperous pressure created by the guitar and piano blend. Steadily ascending in pressure like heating water with a flame, Grdina’s strained string bites and Mitchell’s chordal clips appear to be in continuous motion, backed by Black’s irregular pumps and crashes. Grdina also often slaps his lower strings to create a funky bass line when needed. The blend can sometimes encompass effects pedals and string flanges for rock-directed shading as on the concluding All Caps. But in the main, slurred fingering from the guitarist harmonizes with top-of-scale key tinkling or reflective keyboard sweeps from the pianist, making the two connected no matter the tempo. Grdina also plays the oud here, without adding any false exoticism, though in a situation with Mitchell’s authoritative comping and Black’s syncopated pulsations it’s difficult to tell one strummed instrument from the other. The expanded string oud may figure into the atmospheric and moderato introduction that characterizes Call–Luc, for instance. But once the string player connects with the pianist’s key clips and the drummer’s claps and pats, identification seems vestigial. From that point on, the three alternate between interludes of methodical interaction and speedier thrusts. Black slaps hi-hat and clashes cymbals; Mitchell rasps metronomic keyboard pumps; and Grdina’s picking is so swift that at times it reaches flamenco-styled, blurred-note intensity. How the trio wraps up these contrasting motifs into a solid whole is a metaphor for its playing on the entire session.

Keeping the guitar and drums in the trio, but making a horn its third member is a strategy followed by groups like the UK’s MC3 and Brooklyn’s Stephen Gauci, Wendy Eisenberg and Francisco Melá. The British date on Sounds of the City (Phonocene Records mattclarkmusic.co.uk) adds Charlotte Keele’s trumpet or flagelhorn to Matt Clark’s guitar and James Edmund’s drum. On Live at Scholes Street Studio (Gauci Music gaucimusic.com), it’s Gauci’s tenor saxophone playing alongside Eisenberg’s guitar and Melá’s drums.

In MC3’s case, Keele’s technical prowess is such that by default Clark becomes the melodist. While the two create a contrapuntal dance between dissonance and tonality, Edmunds stays in the background with the occasional snare pop or cymbal vibrations. What that means is that most of the eight tunes resemble the strategy on Conversation #1 (Dispatches). Clark’s usual warm strums and expressive frails are constantly challenged by Keele’s digging out timbres from within her horns that aggressively growl and are often displayed with triplet flourishes. Here, however, the guitarist introduces chiming licks and the two end up complementing each other’s output as they attain a groove. Besides theme deconstruction with sharp whines, portamento breaths and plunger detours, Keele cannily sneaks in brief quotes from familiar tunes, and at one point a Latin-like upsurge, to move along the program. Improvisational friction doesn’t mean the trio avoids slower pieces however. Altercations, the closest to a ballad, includes Clark’s gentle folksy comping and Keele’s slurring reprise of a snatch of Round Midnight in the middle section. She still interjects some raspberries and pointed pops into her solo, but that’s what defines MC3’s POMO sensibility. Furthermore, when Edmunds asserts himself with press rolls in tandem with swinging guitar fingering on the penultimate Traffic, Keele’s half-valve smears race along at double the tempo to confirm individuality and the group’s distinct parameters.

Eisenberg’s playing is more forceful than Clark’s and Gauci’s tenor saxophone projects more robustly than a trumpet so that Live at Scholes Street Studio is the fiercest trio disc here. But while saxophone timbres are screeched and guitar licks flanged and Mela’s drums rumble and pop, each of the six untitled selections are played with certain control. Building up to the extended final track, the trio members advance diverse strategies. At points, Eisenberg twangs the lowest pitched of her strings to create a double bass-like pulse, which contrasts with and accompanies her flat picking or squealing flanges for folk or rock music inferences. Mela studs the tunes with a collection of shuffles, ruffs and rebounds locking together the others’ sound shards into horizontal motion. He adds to the free-form excitement of the concluding tune by unexpectedly yelping Spanish-inflected tones to accelerate the climax. Gauci buzzes tones as often as he bites off textures, with his broken chord expositions boomeranging in and out of the altissimo and sometimes sopranissimo ranges. He introduces continuously breathed sections as well as spectrofluctuation and scooped snorts often in tandem with the guitarist’s slurred finger or chunky rhythm licks. Still his strained skyward squeaks and Eisenberg’s exploration of the strings’ constricted highest tones or the alternative basement-level string strums and nephritic reed cries doesn’t preclude swinging linear underpinning, especially when the drummer solidifies the beat. Eisenberg introduces electronics-like cracks and fuzzy rubs on the sixth and final tune adding to its electric feel. But while waves of pressurized tones intensify as the piece reach a crescendo, tension is released following Mela’s vocal mumbles as the guitarist’s finger picking slides downward to tonality.

German trio Skyhook (Audiosemantics 21002 audiosemantics.bandcamp.com/album/skyhook) consisting of bass clarinetist Rudi Mahall, bassist Jan Roder and guitarist Olaf Rupp are confident enough of their individual skills that they cheerfully improvise in this unique configuration. With peerless rhythmic command the bassist guides linear connection from the bottom with intermittent but steady strokes. The clarinetist sounds a collection of split tones in chalumeau or clarion registers to advance or deconstruct the tunes. Meanwhile the guitarist’s strums and stops bridge potential divisive intervals by capricious adjustments from foreground to background textures; from high-pitched to low-pitched tones; and by frequently using harsh string chops to add extra percussion to comprehensive melody affirmations. Skyhook was recorded live so that every contrapuntal challenge suggested by slurred fingering and crying reed slurs at one point, or constant strumming facing clarion reed peeps at another, must be resolved in real time before the program can proceed. Yet this doesn’t faze the three, who in different combinations have a history of involvement in all manner of advanced sounds. Should Roder for instance, cut off his connective rumble for squealing sul ponticello slices as on verfinftig, then Rupp’s potent strumming takes on that comping role, muting Mahall’s reed barks and bites. Or if the clarinetist completes his exposition with unbroken glissandi as on the concluding wais nicht existiert, then the guitarist’s finger picking adds to the linear narrative. With the ability to incorporate into logical motion every extended technique from bony string flanges or resonating twangs plus altissimo clarinet screeches or body-tube exhumed renal honks, Skyhook is like an aerial act that never has to rely on the waiting net. And if you listen closely, especially on tracks like durch and existiert, you may even hear snatches of swing plus perhaps a song quote that buttresses the sound deconstruction and exploration.

None of the instrumental mixes here include unknown or little used instruments. But it’s the way in which they blend with the guitar that makes these discs memorable.

What we’re listening to this month: New to the Listening Room

45 Lalo: Lacombe; La Tombelle - piano and cello sonatas
Paul Marleyn, Stéphane Lemelin

45 As mountain winds
David Eagle

50 Between Worlds
Margaret Maria and Donna Brown

51 Bach Concertos
L’Harmonie des saisons, Eric Milnes

52 Franz Liszt: Rhapsodies, Études and Transcriptions
Sophia Agranovich

54 Bruckner: Symphony No. 4
London Symphony Orchestra, Sir Simon Rattle

55 Scenes in Tin Can Alley: Piano Music of Florence Price
Josh Tatsuo Cullen

55 Présences Lointaines
Andrew Zhou

56 Quiver
loadbang

58 VEER Quartet
Sarah Bernstein

59 enfolding
String Orchestra of Brooklyn

59 A Series of Indecipherable Glyphs
NakedEye Ensemble

61 All Roads
Anthony Cheung

63 The Astrud Project
Anne Walsh

65 Rich In Symbols II - The Group Of Seven, Tom Thomson & Emily Carr
Chet Doxas

65 Six-ish Plateaus
Triio

66 The Equation of Time
The Charke-Cormier Duo

66 REMEMBER THE AUDIO MONKEY HOUSE

Read the reviews here, then visit thewholenote.com/listening
Remembering GEOFF NUTTALL, violinist

“We want to connect to the simple idea that music can be powerful. Our goal is to make people gasp at the right moment, and feel sad at that right time. That’s a basic concept, but it keeps us going. We don’t want people to go away and say ‘They were really in tune.’ That’s the kiss of death. We want people to talk about how the music made them feel.”

Geoff Nuttall, quoted in The WholeNote, September 2010

The Canadian musical community was deeply saddened to learn of the death on October 19 of Geoff Nuttall, co-founder and first violin of the St. Lawrence String Quartet. Music TORONTO’s artistic producer, Jennifer Taylor – whose email and phone have been flooded with audience members mourning him – responded to The WholeNote’s invitation to expand on the 30-year relationship between the SLSQ and Music TORONTO:

“I adopted the St. Lawrence Quartet for the 1992 season when they were emerging from student life into a career and before they won Banff,” Taylor wrote. “I made them Music TORONTO’s first ever ensemble-in-residence with a three-concert series in which they could program what they wanted to play, often with senior guests they wanted to play with. From there we settled into what became a 30-year relationship; after our residency ended they returned to our stage annually. We looked forward to their interest in repertoire; we lived with them through their changes of personnel; we watched as the stage door opened to see what Geoff Nuttall had done with his hair that year. The SLSQ shared many new works with us, and their love of Haydn. They were always themselves, a unique, exuberant, technically proficient quartet. We loved them; we enjoyed them.”

“Geoff Nuttall was a great violinist,” she continued. “He chose chamber music and he drew others, musicians and audiences, to him. He couldn’t sit still; some of our audience hated that – but they came, they just looked away. When we did some digital concerts during COVID, I noticed that Geoff kept looking out into the house – the empty house – while playing; he knew we were there. He was always communicating – his joy in the music, his understanding, his sheer delight in sharing what he had discovered. Geoff’s death at just 56 is a great loss. It is some small consolation that we live in a digital age and we can hear him and see him in a wealth of recorded performances.”

Co-founder and former member of the SLSQ, Barry Shiffman, now associate dean of the Glenn Gould School and director of the Banff Centre, told CBC Music that “Geoff had an ability that is so rare, the ability to make the listener feel what he is feeling. It sounds so simple, yet it is everything. There’s no security blanket, just a brilliant, electric personality that transmits the feelings directly. I remember hearing him when we were both teenagers, and he had that gift then. It was a way of making music I had never known and it changed me. Sitting beside him for thousands of concerts and countless hours of rehearsals has been one of the great gifts of my life.”

Paul Ennis
Fazil Say
SUN., NOV. 6, 3PM
KOERNER HALL
Tickets start at only $45
World-renowned Turkish-born German-trained pianist Fazil Say’s artistry stretches from chamber music to jazz.
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

ARC Ensemble
SUN., NOV. 13, 2PM
MAZZOLENI CONCERT HALL
Tickets start at only $25
ARC Ensemble (Artists of The Royal Conservatory) performs chamber music by Robert Müller Hartmann at this special concert.
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

Tigran Hamasyan Trio and Majd Sekkar Quartet
SAT., NOV. 19, 8PM KOERNER HALL
Tickets start at only $40
Armenian pianist Tigran Hamasyan “has found a way to keep improvisation fresh and lyrical.” (The Guardian)
Syrian Canadian clarinetist, instructor, and composer Majd Sekkar and his quartet mix and transcend jazz, Middle Eastern, and other musical styles.
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

Taylor Academy Showcase Concert
SAT., NOV. 19, 2022 4:30PM MAZZOLENI CONCERT HALL
Free (ticket required)
The Phil and Eli Taylor Performance Academy for Young Artists presents concerts by the leading young classical musicians in Canada. Hear the stars of tomorrow!
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

Kronos Quartet
KRONOS QUARTET
KRONOS QUARTET and SAM GREEN: A THOUSAND THOUGHTS
A live documentary with the Kronos Quartet Written and directed by Sam Green and Joe Bini
TUES., DEC 6, 8PM KOERNER HALL
Tickets start at only $21
Presented in partnership with the Hot Docs Ted Rogers Cinema
KRONOS QUARTET with STUDENTS FROM THE GLENN GOULD SCHOOL: FIFTY FORWARD
FRI., DEC 8, 8PM MAZZOLENI CONCERT HALL
Tickets start at only $21
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming
KRONOS QUARTET with very special guest
TANYA TAGAQ: MUSIC FOR CHANGE
FRI., DEC 9, 8PM KOERNER HALL
TICKETS START AT ONLY $21
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

Tania Miller conducts the Royal Conservatory Orchestra
FRI., NOV. 25, 8PM KOERNER HALL
Tickets start at only $25
Tania Miller conducts the Royal Conservatory Orchestra in a performance of Silvestrov, Beethoven, and Shostakovich
Supported by The Michael and Sonja Koerner Fund for Classical Programming

KOERNER HALL
2022.23 Concert Season
TICKETS & SUBSCRIPTIONS ON SALE NOW! 416.408.0208 RCMUSIC.COM/PERFORMANCE

Join us at the cinema!

LA RUTA DEL SOL PEREGRINO
or Sons of the Pilgrim Sun

NOVEMBER 10 at 7:30 pm | Tickets $25
Artistic Direction by Esteban La Rotta
Innis Town Hall Theatre, University of Toronto

Join us for the release of Sons of the Pilgrim Sun, filmed July 2022 – an all-new digital production exploring the virtually endless array of harmonies, melodies, and rhythms that make up South America's captivating sentimiento. Don't miss our debut on the big screen!

2022-2023 Season: A Golden Anniversary Celebration

PRAETORIUS
CHRISTMAS VESPERS

DECEMBER 9 & 10 AT 8 PM
DECEMBER 10 AT 2 PM
Artistic Direction by David Fallis
Live at Trinity-St. Paul's Centre

Artistic Director Emeritus David Fallis returns with one of Toronto’s beloved Christmas traditions! A sell-out in previous seasons, this yuletide celebration marks the triumphant return of live audiences!

Buy Tickets at TorontoConsort.org